11 TO THE HONORABLE PRESIDING JUDGE OF THE LOS ANGELES COUNTY 12 SUPERIOR COURT:

14 Petitioner, Leslie Van Houten, thereby petitions this Court for a writ of 15 habeas corpus, and by this verified petition represents that:

16
17 INTRODUCTION

18 19 This petition challenges the Governor's fourth reversal of a finding by the 20 Board of Parole Hearings ("Board") that petitioner, Ms. Van Houten is suitable for 21 parole.<sup>1</sup> The Governor's fourth reversal leaves no doubt that this case has entered a 22 cycle of parole grants by the Board, acting as an independent factfinder assessing 23 the law and record, and reversals by the Governor, acting as an elected official

26 <sup>1</sup> Petitioner uses the term "Board" to mean the Board of Parole Hearings and its commissioners.

1 beholding to his voting constituents. It falls on the judiciary to ensure that a high 2 profile defendant, such as Ms. Van Houten, is judged by the same legal standard as 3 other defendants, even if the outcome is unpopular. That is the very essence of 4 constitutional due process.

5 More than 50 years ago at the age of 19, Ms. Van Houten was arrested for the 6 murders of Leno and Rosemary LaBianca. After three trials, she was sentenced at 7 the age of 20 to an indeterminate life sentence with a mandatory minimum of seven 8 years. Forty-three years later and after twenty-one denials, the Board of Parole 9 Hearings (“Board”) granted her parole at the twenty-second parole hearing. The 10 Board has since found her suitable for parole three more times. The Governor has 11 reversed all four grants of parole.

12 The most recent reversal by Governor Newsom relies on shallow legal 13 reasoning and a misconstrued record without providing a nexus to Ms. Van 14 Houten’s current circumstances. His emphasis on the gravity of the homicides and 15 Ms. Van Houten’s youthful offender mentality over 50 years ago, without duly 16 crediting her impeccable prison record and extensive rehabilitative programming, 17 proves there is nothing Ms. Van Houten can do to earn parole where, as here, the 18 parole gatekeeper is an elected official tied to voter approval and the crimes are 19 linked to the infamy of Charles Manson.

20 The Governor’s focus on Manson is apparent in his decisions. The opening 21 paragraphs of Governor Newsom’s two reversals describe Manson, his cult, and the 22 crimes the he orchestrated at the Tate residence. Ms. Van Houten had no 23 involvement in those murders and did not learn of them until the next day. The 24 question was not whether Manson deserved parole. The question for the Governor 25 to decide was whether Ms. Van Houten, standing alone, was suitable for parole.
26 The Governor erred by regarding Ms. Van Houten as indistinguishable from 1 Charles Manson.

2 Added to this is the Governor error in misconstruing the “historic factors” in 3 the 2018 Comprehensive Risk Assessment (CRA) as proof of Ms. Van Houten’s 4 current dangerousness. Contrary to the Governor’s interpretation, the evaluating 5 psychologist contrasted the negative factors from Ms. Van Houten’s past with the 6 person she is today and concluded that the historic factors are no longer present in 7 her behavior. (Exh. 1, at pp. 11-12.) The CRA does not support the Governor’s 8 claim that the historic factors “remain salient despite Ms. Van Houten’s advanced 9 age and remain cause for concern should she be released into the community.”
10 (Exh. 2, at p 3.)

11 The Governor further erred by relying on the gravity of the commitment 12 offense as a basis for reversal when the 2016 reversal did not allege this as an 13 unsuitability factor. This is not a case where Ms. Van Houten engaged in conduct 14 since the Governor’s prior reversal that placed her suitability in question. Her 15 behavior remains exemplary and continues to garner accomplishments. There also 16 has not been a superceding CRA with negative findings since the favorable 17 evaluation in 2016. Governor Newsom is simply relying on the same evidence in 18 concluding that the “extreme nature of the crime” renders Ms. Van Houten 19 unsuitable for parole. The principle of equitable estoppel prevents the Governor 20 from relying on the gravity of the commitment offense as a reason for denying 21 parole where the Governor did not include this as a reason in the 2016 reversal.
22 (Driscoll v. City of Los Angeles (1967) 67 Cal.2d 297, 305.)

23 The discretion held by the Governor in assessing Ms. Van Houten’s grant of 24 parole “is not a whimsical, uncontrolled power, but a legal discretion, which is 25 subject to the limitations of legal principles governing the subject of its action, and 26 to reversal on appeal where no reasonable basis for the action is shown.” (Sargon

1 Enterprises, Inc. v. Univ. of So. Cal (2012) 55 Cal.4th 747, 771, 773.) The exercise of 2 discretion also cannot be based on ancillary matters, such as the Governor’s 3 personal enmity toward the “Manson Family” or fearing the reaction of the voting 4 public. The Governor’s discretion is subject to the limitations of the legal principles 5 governing the subject of his actions and to reversal where no reasonable basis for 6 the action is shown. (People v. Jacobs (2007) 156 Cal.App.4th 728, 738.)

7 After 51 years in prison with an unblemished record of institutional 8 programming, rehabilitation, and psychological treatment, the Governor’s ill-9 supported denial exceeded the limits of his legal discretion and must be reversed. It 10 also violated Ms. Van Houten’s rights of due process under the state and federal 11 constitutions. (U.S. Const., 5th & 14th Amends.; Estelle v. McGuire (1991) 502 U.S.
12 62; Cal. Const., art. 1, § 7, subd, (a) In re Lawrence (2008) 44
13 Cal.4th 1181, 1192-1193.)

14 PRELIMINARY REQUIREMENTS

15 16 1. Custody. Petitioner is confined by the California Department of 17 Corrections and Rehabilitation (“CDCR”) at the California Institution for Women at 18 Corona, California, Mona D. Houston, Warden (A).

19 2. Jurisdiction and Venue. Petitioner was prosecuted in Los Angeles 20 County. This Court has original jurisdiction to adjudicate the petition and issue the 21 writ. (Cal.Const., art.VI, § 10; Pen. Code,§ 1508.)<sup>2</sup>

22 3. Administrative Remedy. The Board provides no administrative remedy 23 for alleged violations of law by its parole hearing panels or Governor reversals of 24 grants of parole.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY<sup>3</sup>

2
3 4. In 1971, a jury convicted Ms. Van Houten of two counts of first degree 4 murder and one count of conspiracy to commit the August 10, 1969, murders of 5 Rosemary and Leno LaBianca. The trial court sentenced her to death. She had no 6 prior criminal convictions, nor has she committed any crimes in the intervening 7 years.

8 5. In 1976, the convictions were reversed on appeal due to the absence of her 9 attorney from the trial. (People v. Manson (1976) 61 Cal.App.3d 102, 205, 217.) 10 Her second trial resulted in deadlock after the jurors deliberated for 30 days. The 11 trial court granted her bail after finding she did not pose an undue risk to public 12 safety, or a flight risk. As the court predicted, Ms. Van Houten conducted herself in 13 an exemplary manner during the six and a half months before her third trial.

14 6. Ms. Van Houten's third trial occurred in 1978. The jury convicted her of 15 one count of conspiracy to commit murder and two counts of first degree felony 16 murder. Her convictions of felony murder meant the jury was not required to 17 decide if she acted with premeditation or deliberation. This lesser level of 18 culpability resulted in the trial court imposing concurrent indeterminate life 19 sentences with a minimum service term of seven years. The prosecution did not 20 challenge the sentence. (Exh. 4.) She first became eligible for parole the same year 21 as her convictions. (People v. Van Houten, supra, 113 Cal.App.3d at p. 347; Exh. 4.)

22 7. In imposing concurrent sentences, the trial court found as mitigating

25 Manson (1976) 61 Cal.App.3d 102, 205; People v. Van Houten (1980) 113 Cal.App.3d 26 280; In re Van Houten (2004) 116 Cal.App.4th 339; and July 23, 2020 parole suitability hearing transcripts attached as Exhibit 3.

1 factors Ms. Van Houten’s admission that she participated in the LaBianca 2 homicides, and the prosecution’s concession that she was not involved in the Tate 3 killings. The court also considered Ms. Van Houten’s defense of diminished 4 capacity from the mental illness caused by Charles Manson, as well as her 5 prolonged use of hallucinogenic drugs supplied to her by Manson. (Exh. 4.)

6 8. The sentencing court gave “serious attention” to sentencing Ms. Van 7 Houten to probation. It decided against probation on the sole ground that no one 8 convicted of first degree murder in California had ever been granted probation.
9 (Exh. 4.)

10 9. On April 14, 2016, and again on September 6, 2017, the Board found Ms.
11 Van Houten suitable for parole. (Exhs. 10, 11.) Governor Brown reversed the first 12 two grants of parole. (Exhs 6, 7.) The decisions were upheld by the appellate 13 courts.

14 10. On January 30, 2019, the Board issued its third grant of parole. (Exh. 5 ) 15 Governor Newsom reversed this decision on June 3, 2019. (Exh. 9.) The decision 16 was again upheld by the appellate courts.

17 11. On July 23, 2020, after serving more than 51 years in prison as an 18 exemplary inmate, the Board found Ms. Van Houten suitable for parole for a the 19 fourth time. (Exh. 3, at pp. 108-123.) Governor Newsom reversed the fourth grant 20 of parole on November 27, 2020. (Exh. 2.) This petition challenges the Governor’s 21 fourth reversal of parole on federal constitutional grounds and as an abuse of 22 discretion under state law.

STATEMENT OF FACTS

A. Facts of the Commitment Murders.

12. Until her parent's divorce when Ms. Van Houten was 14- years of age, she led a happy, mainstream life. She sang in the family's church choir, attended youth fellowship and summer church camp, and attended high school where she was elected as a homecoming princess and class secretary. (People v. Van Houten, supra, 113 Cal.App.3d at p. 334.) Her home life changed when her parents divorced and her father started a new life with another woman. (Exh. 3, at pp. 11-12; Exh. 5, at pp. 20-22.)

13. The divorce crumbled the comfortable foundation of Ms. Van Houten's life. Unlike today, divorce carried a negative social stigma in the 1960's. Ms. Van Houten's self image changed from the popular homecoming princess of a conventional middle American family to the daughter of divorced parents. This devastated her sense of self-worth. The divorce was a turning point in Ms. Van Houten's life, and caused her to begin using marijuana. (Exh. 3, at pp. 11-12; Exh. 5, at pp. 22-28.)

14. At the age 15, Ms. Van Houten began associating with other teenagers raised by a single parent. (Exh. 3, at p. 12.) Her boyfriend introduced her to harder drugs. (Exh. 3; at pp. 12-13; Exh. 5, at pp. 22-30.) When Ms. Van Houten was 17, she and her boyfriend ran away to San Francisco and she became pregnant. (Exh. 5, at p. 30.) When she returned home from San Francisco, Ms. Van Houten's mother forced her to undergo an illegal abortion. The fetus was placed in a can and buried in the backyard of Ms. Van Houten's family home. (Exh. 3, at pp. 21-27, 75; Exh. 5, at pp. 30-33.) First she lost her father, then she lost her baby. The first loss

1 changed the structure of her world. The second loss left her brokenhearted and she 2 was never the same. (Exh. 3; at p. 12.)

3 15. Ms. Van Houten graduated from business college as a certified secretary.
4 (People v. Van Houten, supra, at p. 343.) After graduation, she traveled up and 5 down the coast of California for five months. Shortly after her nineteenth birthday, 6 Ms. Van Houten met Catherine Share, Bobby Beausoleil, and a friend of Bobby's 7 named Gail, who were living at the Spahn Ranch. They described the Spahn Ranch 8 (the "Ranch") as a commune run by a "Christlike" man named Charles Manson.
9 Ms. Van Houten was attracted to the idea of communal living and agreed to visit 10 the Ranch. (Exh. 3, at pp. 30, 79; Exh. 5, at p. 36-38.)

11 16. Manson started the Spahn Ranch commune after his release from prison 12 in 1967. He named the members of his cult the "Family." Ms. Van Houten initially 13 described her life at the Ranch as idyllic. In the beginning, Manson was very 14 welcoming and treated his cult members with a lot of love, though she did notice he 15 had a "strong personality." (People v. Van Houten, supra, 113 Cal.App.3d at p. 344.)
16 By the end of her time at the Ranch, she felt "nothing but fear and survival." (Exh.
17 3, at p. 19; Exh. 5, at pp. 45-47.) Manson dominated and manipulated the twenty or 18 so permanent "Family" members through isolation, dependence, fear, drugs, sex, 19 and indoctrination. His grip on the Family members became so intractable that, 20 over time, they all accepted Manson's beliefs, including his insistence that acts of 21 murder were required to start the revolution Manson envisioned. (People v. Van 22 Houten, supra, 113 Cal.App.3d at pp. 343-344.)

23 17. On August 10, 1969, Manson ordered Ms. Van Houten and five others 24 cult members to find a change of clothes and get into a car. One of the cult 25 members drove the car around Los Angeles as Manson looked for victims. Manson 26 ordered the driver to stop near the home of Leno and Rosemary LaBianca.

1 18. Manson and Charles “Tex” Watson went inside the house. The rest of the 2 people stayed behind in the car. Watson was armed with a bayonet. He and 3 Manson tied up and blindfolded the LaBiancas. Manson exited the house and 4 ordered Ms. Van Houten and Patricia Krenwinkel to enter the house “and do what 5 Watson told them to do.” (Id., at p. 345.) They entered the house to find Watson 6 holding the LaBiancas at bayonet point. Manson drove away.

7 19. Once inside the residence, Watson told Ms. Van Houten and Krenwinkel 8 to take Mrs. LaBianca into her bedroom and kill her. Krenwinkel got knives from 9 the kitchen. She gave a knife to Ms. Van Houten and kept one for herself. Ms. Van 10 Houten put a pillowcase over Mrs. LaBianca’s head and wrapped a lamp cord 11 around her neck. The cord was still attached to the lamp. Mrs. LaBianca grabbed 12 the lamp and swung it at Ms. Van Houten, who knocked it out Mrs. LaBianca’s 13 hand. Ms. Van Houten forced Mrs. LaBianca onto her bed and held her down as 14 Krenwinkel stabbed Ms. LaBianca in the clavicle, bending the knife. (Id., at p.
15 346.)

16 20. Ms. Van Houten called to Watson who entered the bedroom with a 17 bayonet. Ms. Van Houten turned away as he stabbed Mrs. LaBianca eight times 18 with the bayonet. Each stab wound delivered by Watson’s bayonet inflicted a fatal 19 blow. (Ibid.) Ms. Van Houten “stared off into a den” as Watson stabbed Mrs.
20 LaBianca. Watson turned Ms. Van Houten around, handed her a knife, and told 21 her to “do something.” (Exh. 3, at p. 24; Exh. 5, at pp. 68, 70.) Ms. Van Houten 22 “was having a hard time holding on to what was happening at that moment.” In 23 response to Watson’s command that she take the knife and “do something,” Ms. Van 24 Houten stabbed Mrs. LaBianca as she lay on the floor. Ms. Van Houten “felt” Ms.
25 LaBianca was dead at the time, but she did not know for certain if that was true.
26 (People v. Van Houten, supra, 113 Cal.App.3d at p. 346.) After it was over, Ms. Van

1 Houten did not feel that what she had done was wrong and criticized herself for not 2 being able to participate in the murder in the same way as Watson and Krenwinkel.
3 (5, at pp. 77-78.)

4 5 B. Manson’s Control Over Family Cult Members.

6
7 21. The courts, Board, and prosecutors alike have acknowledged Manson’s 8 complete control over his cult members, including Ms. Van Houten. In upholding 9 Manson’s murder convictions on direct appeal, Division One of the Second Appellate 10 District found that Ms. Van Houten and the other defendants in the LaBianca 11 murders were acting under the influence and orders of Charles Manson. (People v.
12 Manson, supra, 61 Cal.App.3d at p. 205.) The court further found that “Manson’s 13 position of authority was firmly acknowledged. It was understood that membership 14 in the Family required giving up everything to Manson and never disobeying him.” 15 (Id., at p. 128.) The court described Manson’s control over the lives of his cult 16 members as including telling them where they could sleep, when they could eat, 17 and what they could wear. (Id., at p. 127.) According to the court, Manson’s 18 “establishment and retention of his position as the unquestioned leader was one of 19 design” (Id., at p. 128), and the willingness of Family members “to follow Manson’s 20 every direction was salient to the [prosecution’s] case” against Manson, even though 21 he was not the actual killer in any of the murders.

22 22. The Board also acknowledged Manson’s control over the cult members, 23 including Ms. Van Houten. (Exh. 3, at pp. 27, 35, 42, 60; Exh. 5, pp. 120-121.)

24 23. The Los Angeles District Attorney expressly agreed that Manson exerted 25 complete power and control over his cult members, including Ms. Van Houten.
26 (Exh. In re Houten, Cal. Superior Ct. number S230851 [District Attorney’s brief].)

1 The keystone of the District Attorney’s case against Manson was that he 2 orchestrated the conduct of cult members who engaged in the actual killings.

3 24. The evidence at Ms. Van Houten’s recent youth offender hearing 4 pursuant to People v. Franklin (2016) 63 Cal.4th 261 provided further evidence of 5 Manson’s control. The testimony of Catherine Share established that selected cult 6 members were not permitted to leave the Ranch. These cult members were 7 threatened with torture and death if they left the cult.<sup>4</sup> Ms. Van Houten was one of 8 the cult members Manson forbade from leaving the ranch. (Exh. 12, pp. 45-47, 57-9 58.)

11 C. November 2018 Comprehensive Risk Assessment (“CRA”).

12 13 25. The Board reviewed Ms. Van Houten’s November 1, 2018, CRA in 14 considering her suitability for parole. (Exh.1.) This is the CDCR’s most recent 15 psychological evaluation of Ms. Van Houten.

16 26. Forensic Psychologist Tasi Athans, Ph.D., conducted the evaluation and 17 prepared the assessment. Dr. Athans began her report by summarizing Ms. Van 18 Houten’s development as a child, adolescent, and adult, including the impact of her 19 parent’s divorce and the abortion. (Exh. 1, at pp. 2-7.) She described Ms. Van 20 Houten’s criminal history as having no juvenile arrests or adjudications. As an

22 <sup>4</sup> The statements of former Family cult member Barbara Hoyt that cult 23 members were “free to come and go as they chose” were proven false at Ms. Van 24 Houten’s Franklin hearing. Nevertheless, Ms. Hoyt’s false statements were relied 25 on by Governor Brown in his 2016 reversal of Ms. Van Houten’s grant of parole.
26 (Exh. 12, at pp. 45-50, 57-58.) Unlike Ms. Van Houten, Ms. Hoyt was not among 27 the group of selected cult members whom Manson forbid from leaving the cult.

1 adult, Ms. Van Houten sustained three arrests for vehicle theft and one arrest for 2 burglary. She was released without charges filed in any of the arrests. Her only 3 convictions were for the life crimes, which also constituted her only acts of violence.
4 (Exh. 1, at pp. 7.)

5 27. Dr. Athans considered Ms. Van Houten's prior CRAs in assessing her 6 current risk of violence. The doctor cited the CRAs of K. Kropf, Ph.D., which 7 concluded in 2007 and 2016 that Ms. Van Houten represented a "low" risk of 8 violence. Dr. Carrera prepared the 2010 CRA. She too found that Ms. Van Houten 9 presented a low risk of violence. Dr. Larmer issued a Subsequent Risk Assessment 10 ("SRA") on February 2, 2013, updating the 2010 CRA. The SRA did not assess Ms.
11 Van Houten's risk of violence but found she maintained the gains noted in the 2010
12 CRA. (Exh. 1, p 7-8.)

13 28. Dr. Athans's described Ms. Van Houten's mental status as normal. She 14 noted Ms. Van Houten's claim that she tried alcohol at the age of 15, and used 15 marijuana, LSD, Benzedrine, Mescaline and Methedrine. At the Spahn Ranch ("the 16 Ranch"), she regularly used LSD and marijuana but was found not to be under the 17 influence of LSD on the night of the killings. When asked about her prior substance 18 abuse, Ms. Van Houten said she had remained sober for many years, and believed 19 using drugs would be "extremely disrespectful to the family and the memory of my 20 victims." She expressed her "love" of being sober, and that when she thinks of 21 freedom "alcohol and drugs are the last thing on my mind." The absence of 22 substance-abuse related RVRs supported this claim. Ms. Van Houten also has 23 participated in substance-abuse treatment programs over the years. (Exh. 1, at pp.
24 7-9.)

25 28. Dr. Athans also found Ms. Van Houten to be free of any psychiatric 26
27

1 disorders. The doctor considered Ms. Van Houten's participation in individual 2 psychotherapy and group therapy to address past relationships, history of 3 traumatic incidents, and how her past impacts her current decisions. Ms. Van 4 Houten has continued to remain disciplinary free in prison, with a single counseling 5 chrono in 1981,<sup>5</sup> and never engaged in any acts of violence. She has completed 6 numerous self-help programs, work assignments, and volunteer positions. She also 7 has earned Bachelor and Master degrees in prison. The doctor found Ms. Van 8 Houten's parole plans to be "strong." (Exh. 1, 9-11.)

9 29. In assessing Ms. Van Houten's current risk of violence, Dr. Athans began 10 by considering her historic behavioral factors from the divorce of Ms. Van Houten's 11 parents at the age of 14 to her incarceration at the age of 19. The doctor described 12 Ms. Van Houten's youthful mentality as including acts of violence and a violent 13 attitude based on her participation in the LaBianca murders, other antisocial 14 behavior, troubled relationships, traumatic experiences, and substance abuse 15 problems. During this same time frame, Ms. Van Houten engaged in impulsive 16 behavior, including drug use and promiscuity, and her involvement in the life crime 17 evinced a callous lack of empathy for the victims. Even so, the doctor found no 18 characteristics of a psychopathology. (Exh. 1, pp 11-12.)

19 Dr. Athans concluded her assessment of the historic behavioral factors by 20 stating, "For nearly 50 years, she has exhibited prosocial behaviors and has sought 21 positive relationships with others. She has not shown herself to be deceptive, 22

23 <sup>5</sup>Dr. Athans' incorrectly stated in her report that this was a serious rules 24 violation documented in an RVR. It was, instead, a minor rule violation handled 25 with counseling. Ms. Van Houten has never received an RVR.
26
27

1 conning, or to lack remorse. Her total PCL-R score was below the mean of North 2 American female inmates and below the cutoff or threshold commonly used to 3 identify dissociative or psychopathic personality.” This conclusion drew a sharp 4 distinction between Ms. Van Houten’s mental state prior to the age of 19, and the 5 rehabilitated woman she is today. (Exh. 1, at pp. 16-17.)

6 30. Dr. Athans’ assessment of Ms. Van Houten’s “clinical factors” covered the 7 period of time from her prior CRA in 2016. She found Ms. Van Houten continued to 8 demonstrate insight into the factors contributing to her involvement in the killings, 9 including a description of the causative factors. This showed the benefit of Ms. Van 10 Houten’s extensive participation in self-help programs, including individual 11 therapy. Dr. Athans found that Ms. Van Houten acknowledged her past 12 susceptibility to the influence of Manson but took full responsibility for her own 13 behavior without minimizing her role or externalizing blame. She was impressed 14 by Ms. Van Houten’s genuine remorse for the victims and concluded the “risk factor 15 of a lack of insight” was “not present.” (Exh. 1.)

16 31. In considering the impact of Ms. Van Houten’s status as a youth offender, 17 Dr. Athans found it “very likely” that Ms. Van Houten’s involvement in the 18 homicides “was significantly impacted by characteristics of youth, including 19 impulsivity, the inability to adequately foresee the long-term consequences of her 20 behavior, and the inability to manage her emotions that resulted from a forced 21 abortion.” These factors diminished her culpability in the killings. Dr. Athans 22 found that Ms. Van Houten harbors “genuine regret” for her involvement in the life 23 crime and “assumed full responsibility for her behavior, without externalizing 24 blame.” (Exh. 1, pp 15-16)

1 32. Dr. Athans summarized Ms. Van Houten's suitability for parole as 2 follows,

3
4 [Ms. Van Houten] does not underestimate the impact of her 5 crime, both with respect to the victims and their families, or 6 to society and she appears to be genuinely remorseful for 7 her role in the life crime. She appears to have benefitted 8 from the natural maturation that comes with age, as well 9 as from the many years of programming offered by the 10 institution. Ms. Van Houten appears to have seized every 11 opportunity provided to her to make positive changes in her 12 life (with respect to education, vocation, and self-help). At 13 present, her risk for violent reoffending is in the low range 14 . . .

15 (Exh. 1, at p. 17.)

16 33. Based on her extensive analysis, the doctor concluded Ms. Van Houten to 17 be a low risk for violence recidivism if released to parole. (Exh. 1, at p. 17.)

18 19 D. The Board's 2019 Parole Hearing and Decision.

20 21 34. On January 30, 2019, the Board rendered its third straight finding that 22 Ms. Van Houten was suitable for parole. In arriving at this decision, the Board 23 found that Ms. Van Houten's accepted full responsibility for her actions and did not 24 blame Manson. She testified in this regard as follows,

1 There is nothing in that night of murder that I don't take 2 responsibility for or all that came before. I went to the 3 ranch. I became a participant in the group at the ranch. I 4 wanted to be a part of the revolution and the murders that 5 were going to spark it. There's no part of me that says it 6 was [Manson's] fault that I did all that. I willingly sat and 7 listened. I let myself let go of who I had been . . . . [¶] I 8 don't minimize. I feel like if I minimized, I would find easy 9 ways to live with the guilt of what happened because I'm 10 passing the buck onto somebody else so my conscience 11 doesn't have to deal with it. But that's not who I am and 12 it's not what I do with my life. . . . [¶] "So I suppose it's 13 always there to say I'm blaming [Manson]. . . . [¶] He was 14 convicted for controlling us and we were convicted for doing 15 what we did in the houses. I don't - - I don't let myself off 16 from personal responsibility.

18 (Exh. 5, at pp. 86-87 )

19 35. The Board believed the sincerity of this testimony. The presiding 20 commissioner stated, "I did want to put on the record that, you know, it doesn't 21 show over the . . . microphones, but I do want to note the expression of remorse I 22 saw on your face when you talked about the abortion and when you talked about 23 the murders and the realization of . . . how horrific it was." (Exh. 5, at pp. 87-88 ) 24 He further acknowledged the genuineness of Ms. Van Houten's expressions of 25 remorse for her participation in the murders and commended her extensive 26
27

1 personal growth leading her to engage in positive behaviors aimed at making 2 amends for her actions. He characterized her behavior in prison as “probably one of 3 the most exemplary I’ve ever seen.” (Exh. 5, at p.156.)

4 5 E. The Board’s 2020 Parole Hearing and Decision.

6 7 1. Factual evidence.

8
9 36. Ms. Van Houten’s most recent parole hearing was held on July 23, 2020.
10 The Board again granted Ms. Van Houten parole at the conclusion of the hearing.

11 37. Commissioner Grounds presided over the 2020 parole hearing. He began 12 by summarizing Ms. Van Houten’s teenage years, including the social stigma she 13 experienced from the divorce of her parents and the way in which the divorce 14 changed Ms. Van Houten’s social support system. (Exh. 3, at p. 11.) The 15 commissioner also noted Ms. Van Houten’s pregnancy and the illegal abortion 16 forced upon her by her mother. He recognized that , to this day, Ms. Van Houten 17 mourns the loss of the only child she will ever conceive, and was never the same after 18 that loss. (Exh. 3, pp. 27-29, 75.)

19 38. The Board recognized that the abortion and divorce were the causative 20 factors of Ms. Van Houten making her susceptible to becoming a member of the 21 Manson cult. (Exh.3, at pp. 20-33.) Ms. Van Houten explained that Catherine 22 Share recruited her to go to the ranch at a time when she “was at an all-time 23 bottom low.” Ms. Van Houten had no income or reliable housing when she met 24 Share. She resented her parents, was grieving the loss of her baby, and felt 25 “extreme guilt” that she allowed her mother to force her into aborting a baby she
27

1 dearly wanted. The utopian image of an idyllic communal life containing people 2 dedicated to interpersonal growth sounded to Ms. Van Houten like a perfect 3 solution. She was 19 years of age and operating under the judicially recognized 4 hallmarks of youth, including impulsiveness, gullibility, and susceptibility to the 5 influence of a dominate adult. (Exh. 3, at pp. 10-111; see § 4801, subd. (c); People v.
6 Franklin, supra, 63 Cal.4th at p. 268.)

7 39. Following two months of persistent coaxing, Share succeeded in 8 convincing Ms. Van Houten to visit the Spahn Ranch. She believed Manson, 9 through his teachings, could guide her into overcoming her guilt and low self 10 esteem. (Exh. 3, at pp. 27-29, 31.) She admitted allowing the cult's teachings to 11 become more important than her own sense of right and wrong. She explained she 12 now understood how she sold out herself over and over again during her time as a 13 member of the Manson cult. (Exh. 3, at p. 29.) Ms. Van Houten wanted Manson's 14 acceptance, whom she regarded as the living embodiment of Jesus Christ. She felt 15 her survival depended on adhering to Manson's teachings. (Exh. 3, at pp. 14, 17, 16 30, 79.)

17 In discussing her reasons for following Manson, Ms. Van Houten said she 18 looked back at herself as a weak person who allowed someone else to take control of 19 her life and she handed it over to him. (Exh. 3, at p. 35.) In addressing her 20 involvement in the LaBianca killings, Ms. Van Houten explained it was based on 21 her belief in Manson's apocalyptic prediction of the coming revolution and "felt 22 obligated to participate" because "it was something that had to be done." (Exh. 3, at 23 p. 30.)

24 40. Ms. Van Houten described a hierarchy of cult members at the Ranch.
25 The closest people to Manson were Lynette "Squeaky" Fromme, Patricia 26

1 Krenwinkle, Mary Brunner, Sandra Good, and Nancy Pitman. They were the first 2 people Manson's recruited into the Family. The next level of the hierarchy included 3 Dianne Lake, Ruthie Morehouse, and the younger women. Ms. Van Houten was in 4 the third circle of cult members, which was the outer most layer. Cult members in 5 this layer were free to come and go from the Ranch once Manson regarded them as 6 no longer useful. Ms. Van Houten, however, was never allowed to leave because 7 Manson used her to keep Bobby Beausoleil happy so he would stay at the Ranch for 8 his musical talent. Manson also required Ms. Van Houten to entertain the "bikers" 9 and clean out the barn. She complied with these orders in an effort to gain 10 Manson's acceptance. (Exh. 3, at pp. 44-47.)

11 41. Commissioner Grounds asked Ms. Van Houten to describe the causative 12 circumstances leading up to the killings. (Exh. 3, at p. 28.) He did so presumably 13 in response to Governor Newsom's reliance on the gravity of the commitment 14 offense in reversing the Board's third grant of parole. Ms. Van Houten responded 15 that she and the other cult members tried to become a single mind. Manson 16 lectured that they should let go of everything their parents taught them. Ms. Van 17 Houten was vulnerable to this message because of her mother's insistence that she 18 have the abortion and her father leaving the family for another woman. (Exh. 3, at 19 pp.11-12, 28-31, 42 )

20 42. As time went on, Manson escalated his self-proclaimed divinity. He 21 ordered Ms. Van Houten to read aloud to him from the Book of Revelations to find 22 symbolism matching his view of an apocalyptic race war, after which the family 23 would emerge as the world's leaders. (Exh. 3, at p. 16; Exh. 5, at p. 53.) Manson 24 believed the Beatles were talking to him through the White Album by referencing 25 the "son of man," which he believed meant "Manson." In portraying himself as the 26
27

1 reincarnation of Jesus Christ, Manson preached to them that he “died on the cross 2 with forgiveness” but that he was not going to do that again during this “second 3 coming.” (Exh. 3, at pp. 16-17.) Ms. Van Houten and the other cult members strove 4 to become “empty vessels” so they could serve Manson and reflect his ideas. (Exh.
5 3, at p. 25.)

6 43. At one point, Ms. Van Houten became involved with a biker named 7 Sammy. Manson became furious and evicted Sammy from the Ranch. Manson 8 then told Charles “Tex” Watson “we’re losing [Ms. Van Houten], you need to keep 9 an eye on her.” (Exh. 3, at p. 20.) This confirmed Ms. Van Houten’s suspicion that 10 she was not free to leave the Ranch. A few days later Sammy returned to the 11 Ranch to get Ms. Van Houten. She refused to go with him because she believed 12 leaving the Ranch would expose her to “grave danger,” both personally and because 13 of the imminent race war Manson predicted. (Exh. 3, at p. 20.)

14 44. Manson ordered Ms. Van Houten to stay close to Patricia Krenwinkle 15 shortly after Ms. Van Houten arrived at the Ranch. Krenwinkle was a part of 16 Manson’s inner cycle and Ms. Van Houten wanted the same. (Exh. 3, at p. 20.) She 17 suspected there would be killings every night up to the race war but believed in 18 Manson and assumed the killings were a necessary part of surviving the coming 19 apocalypse. She told the Board she believed in Manson and what he saw coming.
20 She was committed to it. (Exh. 3, at pp. 20-22.)

21 45. On the day after the Tate murders, Manson asked Ms. Van Houten if she 22 was “crazy enough to believe in him.” She said yes. That evening she got into a car 23 with Manson, Watson, Krenwinkle, and three other cult members. The evening 24 culminated with her participating in the LaBianca murders. (Exh. 3, at pp. 22-24.) 25
26
27

1 46. Ms. Van Houten concluded her factual description by excoriating herself
2 for not possessing the humanity to refrain from her part in the killings. She said 3 she asks herself every day how she could have committed this crime, and that she 4 finds it “hard to live with.” She now sees there was no justifying what she did, and 5 that her actions were shameful. (Exh. 3, 36-37.)

6 7 2. Prior criminal history.

8
9 47. Ms. Van Houten was arrested several times prior to the LaBianca 10 killings. She was not arraigned on any of the arrests. (Exh. 5, at pp. 108-109.) Ms.
11 Van Houten later learned that a month before the murders there was a confidential 12 informant residing at the Ranch. (Exh. 3, at p. 80.)

13 14 3. Prison achievements and conduct.

15
16 48. Ms. Van Houten reviewed her accomplishments since the prior parole 17 hearing. As expected, she had remained free of rule violations or counseling 18 chronos. She continued her work as chairperson of the Inmate Advisory 19 Committee. (Exh. 3, at p. 51.) This is a potentially volatile position for a prison 20 inmate because it requires giving other inmates information they may not want to 21 hear. Notwithstanding the challenges inherent in this position, Ms. Van Houten 22 decided to serve as chairperson for another year because her 50 years of prison 23 experience helped keep the prison administration and inmate population connected.
24 Further, CIW is a “programing prison.” Ms. Van Houten stated that she found 25 value in helping to keep the beneficial prison programs operable. Also, she 26

1 expressed her belief that staying in touch with the younger inmates reminded her 2 of where she came from. She viewed her work as the chairperson of the Inmate 3 Advisory Committee contributing to her ongoing process of making living amends
4 for the damage she caused when she was young. (Exh. 3, at pp. 51-56.)

5 49. The Board described Ms. Van Houten's behavior in prison as 6 "exceptional." They found her to be a dependable and efficient worker for many 7 years without a single rule violation during her nearly five decades in prison. She 8 has continually engaged in rehabilitative programming and made amends for her 9 actions by facilitating many programs for other inmates. (Exh. 3, at pp. 51-53.)

10 4. Board's consideration of the CRA's.

13 50. The Board considered Ms. Van Houten's most recent CRA in assessing 14 her suitability for parole. The CRA was conducted by forensic psychologist Tesi 15 Athans, Ph.D., on November 1, 2018. (Exh. 3.) The Board noted with favor Dr.
16 Athans's comment that Ms. Van Houten "seized every opportunity provided to her 17 to make positive changes in her life, with respect to education, vocation, and self-18 help." (Exh. 3, at p. 70.) The Board also relied on Dr. Athans's overall conclusion 19 that Ms. Van Houten presented a "low risk of violent recidivism." (Exh. 3, at pp.
20 71-72.) Ms. Van Houten has been deemed a low risk of violence since 1978. Her 21 psychological evaluation on August 22, 1978, did not use this same language but 22 concluded, "There is nothing that would indicate [Ms. Van Houten's] violence 23 potential is any greater than average." (R.L. Flanagan, M.D., Psych. Consultant, 24 dated August 22, 1978.)

1                   5. Additional assessments of Ms. Van Houten’s 2                   behavior.

3 4           52. Cult expert, Patrick O’Reilly, Ph.D., regularly met and corresponded with 5 Ms. Van Houten regarding the psychological control Manson exerted over her. Dr.
6 O’Reilly opined that Ms. Van Houten had successfully broken free from Manson’s 7 influence. He concluded because she had, through therapy, purged herself of 8 Manson’s control, she no longer posed a risk of succumbing to the influence of a 9 dominate personality. Ms. Van Houten told the Board she intended to continue her 10 sessions with Dr. O’Reilly into the future. (Exh. 3, at pp. 59-61.)

11           53. John Lee, a former Associate Warden at CIW, had known Ms. Van 12 Houten for 14-years. As the associate warden, he and Ms. Van Houten had 13 numerous discussions, which gave him insight into Ms. Van Houten’s personality.
14 Mr. Lee testified that Ms. Van Houten expressed to him deep and sincere remorse 15 for her involvement in the life crimes. In his opinion, she is “prosocial” and 16 facilitates many rehabilitative programs inside the prison. (Exh. 3, at pp. 62, 84.)

17                   6. Victim representatives.

18 19           54. Debra Tate was allowed to testify at Ms Van Houten’s hearing as the 20 representative of a nephew of Mr. LaBianca. She has appeared at Ms. Van 21 Houten’s parole hearings since the early 2000's advocating against a grant of 22 parole. Ms. Tate accused Ms. Van Houten of “not coming clean with everything,” 23 inferring there were secret facts that had not been disclosed. She accused Ms. Van 24 Houten’s attorney of “revictimizing us victims over and over again” by representing
26
27

1 Ms. Van Houten at the parole hearings. (Exh. 3, at pp. 98-99.) Ms. Tate continued 2 by accusing Commissioner Grounds of answering the questions posed to Ms. Van 3 Houten at the last two parole hearings, which she claimed enabled Ms. Van Houten 4 to “have all the right answers.” (Exh. 3, at p. 101.) In addition to her personal 5 disagreement that Ms. Van Houten is suitable for parole, Ms. Tate described the 6 petition she initiated to “to keep Ms. Van Houten in prison until she dies.” She 7 claimed the petition garnered 170,000 signatures with 28,000 adding written 8 comments. (Exh. 3, at p. 102.)

9         55. Louis Smaldino testified as the oldest nephew of Leno and Rosemary 10 LaBianca. He claimed Ms. Van Houten “downplayed her role in the murders” and 11 urged the court to disregard her latest ploy for sympathy involving claims of 12 spousal abuse. (Exh. 3, at pp. 103, 106.) Ms. Van Houten has never made claims of 13 spousal abuse at a parole hearing or otherwise. Mr. Smaldino made an emotional 14 plea that Ms. Van Houten not be released on parole because of her participation in 15 killing “all these innocent young people and even an unborn child.” (Exh. 3, at p.
16 103.) This comment confused the Tate killings with the LaBianca murders. There 17 is no evidence that Ms. Van Houten knew of the Tate murders until the day after 18 those murders occurred. She did not participated in the Tate murders.

19                                 7. The Board’s 2020 decision.

21         56. The Board again concluded that Ms. Van Houten “does not pose an 22 unreasonable risk to public safety and is suitable for parole.” (Exh. 3, at p. 109.) In 23 explaining the Board’s reasoning, the presiding commissioner stated that Ms. Van 24 Houten “exhibited extreme immature thinking” in handling the traumatic events of

1 her early teenage years. He identified the childhood traumas as including her 2 forced abortion and the breakup of her family. (Exh. 3, at p. 110.) The Board found 3 that Ms. Van Houten’s “immature thinking” led to her associating with people she 4 met “on the road” and “getting into drugs” at an early age, which proved her 5 “diminished culpability” because of the hallmarks of her youth. The Board gave 6 great weight to her age as a youthful offender and found that her young age made 7 her “very vulnerable to negative influences.” (Exh. 3, at pp. 110-111.)

8 57. The Board noted with favor Ms. Van Houten’s participation in numerous 9 rehabilitative programs and 50 years of positive institutional behavior. The Board 10 found that her record of positive conduct supported the answers she gave at the 11 hearing and showed “a life that’s turned around.” (Exh. 3, at pp. 111, 113.)

12 Commissioner Grounds summarized the Board’s findings by stating,

14 I’ve done over a thousand cases, done over a thousand 15 hearings, and you’re one of the best programming inmates 16 I’ve seen. You’ve shown signs of remorse and accepting 17 responsibility for your criminal actions as evidenced by 18 your testimony. Your disciplinary-free behavior, your 19 positive behavior, your words and your deeds agree with 20 each other. There’s no discrepancy, and I hold great weight 21 to your behavior.

23 (Exh. 3, at p. 113.)

24 58. Commissioner Grounds also commended Ms. Van Houten on the way she 25 had used her educational and rehabilitative accomplishments to positively impact 26

1 other inmates. He described a school graduation he attended at the prison where 2 “the great majority of [graduates] spoke to [sic] how you’d helped them. I could see 3 that you were having a very positive affect on the culture at CIW.” (Exh. 3, at p.
4 114.) According to the commissioner, Ms. Van Houten created “a significant 5 support system inside the prison for herself and others and also developed one for 6 the outside to make her transition as smooth as possible.” (Exh. 3, at p. 115.)

7 F. Governor Newsom’s Reversals.

8 1. The Governor’s 2019 reversal.

11 12 59. Governor Newsom issued his first reversal in 2019. This reversal was in 13 response to the Board’s third grant of parole. The decision began by describing Ms.
14 Van Houten’s act of joining the Manson cult in 1968 at the age of 19, and Manson’s 15 belief in a racially-motivated apocalypse he called “Helter Skelter.” The Governor 16 continues by describing the murders of Sharon Tate, Steven Parent, Abigail Folger, 17 Wojciech Fryowski, and Jay Sebring, and that Ms. Tate was eight-months 18 pregnant when she was stabbed 16 times, as well as the number of times each of 19 the other “Tate” victims was stabbed. This lurid description of the Tate murders 20 was irrelevant, as Ms. Van Houten was not involved in those murders and nor did 21 she know of them until the day after they happened. (Exh. 9, at p. 1.)

22 60. Only after describing the Tate murders and Manson’s terrifying vision of 23 “Helter Skelter” does the Governor summarize Ms. Van Houten’s involvement in 24 the August 10, 1969, murders of Leno and Rosemary LaBianca, and her subsequent 25 arrest on November 25, 1969. (Exh. 9, at pp. 1-2.) 26
27

1 61. In articulating the issues and governing legal standard, Governor 2 Newsom stated the question he must decide is “whether Ms. Van Houten will pose a 3 current danger to the public if released from prison.” That is an incorrect 4 statement of the law. The applicable legal standard is whether Ms. Van Houten 5 currently posed an “unreasonable risk” of danger or threat to public safety. (In re
6 Lawrence (2008) 44 Cal.4th 1181, 1208, 1214; In re Shaputis (2008) 44 Cal.4th 7 1241, 1254.) The risk must be “unreasonable” because every convicted felon, poses 8 a risk of danger, no matter how low. (Ibid.)

9 62. The Governor further lessened his evidentiary burden by citing the 10 statement in Lawrence that “In rare circumstances, the aggravated nature of the 11 crime alone can provide a valid basis for denying parole, even when there is strong 12 evidence of rehabilitation and no other evidence of current dangerousness.” (Exh. 9, 13 at p. 2 [citing In re Lawrence, supra, 44 Cal.4th at pp. 1211, 1214.]) The cited 14 passage is taken out of context and, again, oversimplifies the legal standard.
15 Though our Supreme Court in Lawrence acknowledged that in rare circumstances, 16 the aggravated nature of the crime alone can provide some evidence of current 17 dangerousness if there is a nexus between the crime and the inmate’s current 18 individualized circumstances. (In re Lawrence, supra, 44 Cal.4th at p. 1214.)
19 Governor Newsom’s contention that the gravity of Ms. Van Houten’s commitment 20 offense alone can sufficiently support a finding of current dangerousness is an 21 incorrect interpretation of the legal standard.

22 63. After citing the facts of the case and his interpretation of the legal 23 standard, Governor Newsom concludes Ms. Van Houten was not suitable for parole 24 because she and the Manson Family committed “some of the most notorious and 25 brutal killings in California's history,” and that the “gruesome crimes perpetrated 26
27

1 by Ms. Van Houten and other Manson Family members in an attempt to incite 2 social chaos to continue to inspire fear to this day.” The Governor continues, 3 “Almost 50 years later, the magnitude of these crimes and their impact on society 4 endure.” This is not an analysis of Ms. Van Houten’s current circumstances, nor 5 does it establish the legally necessary nexus between the murders and her current 6 circumstances. It, instead, focuses on the public’s reaction to the Manson murders.
7 (Exh. 9, at p. 3.)

8 64. The Governor next expressed “concern” over Ms. Van Houten’s role in the 9 killings and her “potential for future violence” because of her “eager participation” 10 in the killings. He found her explanation of these aspects of the murders 11 “insufficient.” (Exh. 9, at p. 3.)

12 65. The Governor also faulted Ms. Van Houten for telling the Board she 13 would have been a better daughter if she could redo the past. This, according to the 14 Governor, showed a lack of understanding for the serious trauma she suffered from 15 living in a dysfunctional family environment. Her comment about being a better 16 daughter demonstrated to the Governor that Ms. Van Houten “still cannot 17 adequately explain her destructive reaction to difficult external factors beyond her 18 control.” (Exh. 9, at p. 4.)

19 66. The Governor said he was “troubled” by Ms. Van Houten’s comment to 20 the Board that Manson never forced himself on her sexually. The Governor ignored 21 Ms. Van Houten’s explanation that, though Manson had not forced himself on her 22 sexually, he regularly gave her high doses of mind-altering drugs and exerted 23 violent control over all of his cult members. Setting aside the unnecessarily 24 demeaning description of the nature of Manson’s sexual acts, her statement that 25 Manson had not raped her had nothing to do with whether she had fully examined 26
27

1 her “ongoing susceptibility to negative influences and manipulation.” (Exh. 9, at p.
2 4.)

3 68. Governor Newsom concluded “the horrendous nature of these murders 4 and Ms. Van Houten's current, related lack of insight” required that she “must take 5 additional steps that demonstrate she will never return to this type of submission 6 or violence again.” He gave no guidance on the additional steps he considers 7 necessary to make Ms. Van Houten suitable for parole. (Exh. 9, at pp. 4-5.)

8 2. The Governor’s 2020 reversal.

11 69. The Governor’s 2020 reversal adds little new to his 2019 reversal. He 12 again begins with the same description of Ms. Van Houten’s membership in the 13 Manson cult, the Tate murders, and Manson apocalyptic vision of Helter Skelter.
14 (Exh. 2, at p. 1.) He again relies primarily on the gravity of the commitment offense
15 and his misinterpretation of Dr. Athans’s findings regarding Ms. Van Houten’s 16 mentality prior to her incarceration. Also like the 2019 decision, the Governor 17 again contends Ms. Van Houten failed to adequately explain why she allowed 18 herself to succumb to Manson’s influence. As again emphasized the public’s 19 reaction to the crimes that he characterized as “among the most infamous and fear-20 inducing in California history.” (Exh. 2, at p. 3.)

21 70. In addition to his recapitulation of the 2019 reversal, the Governor found 22 that Ms. Van Houten gave conflicting testimony during the 2020 parole when she 23 said she felt obligated to participate in the killings and called on Watson to kill Mrs.
24 LaBianca when Krenwinkle’s knife bent. She described the feeling of stabbing Ms.
25 LaBianca as “horrible” and “predatory.” (Exh. 2, at pp. 2-3.) According to the

1 Governor, this conflicted with the purported comment she made after returning to 2 the Ranch that the killings were “fun,” and the fact she continued to follow Manson 3 until her arrest. (Exh. 2, at p. 3.) The Governor found that these “inconsistencies” 4 indicated “gaps” in her “insight or candor, or both, which bear on her current risk 5 for dangerousness.” (Exh. 2, at p. 4.)

6 A fair reading of the transcript proves Ms. Van Houten described the killings 7 as “horrible” from her current perspective looking back. Her description of the 8 killings as “fun” were from the perspective of a 19-year-old under influence of a 9 dangerous cult who was trying to attain the cult’s approval. (Exh. 3.) The record 10 does not support the Governor’s conclusion that the differing perspectives showed a 11 lack of insight. Unlike the Governor, the Board interpreted Ms. Van Houten’s 12 current description of the murder as “horrible” and “predatory” proved she had 13 faced the harsh reality of her actions rather than minimizing her responsibility.
14 (Exh. 3.)

15 The Governor again misinterpreted the record when he found Dr. Athans’ 16 summary of the “historic factors” from the 2018 CRA proved Ms. Van Houten’s was 17 currently dangerous. (Exh. 2, at p. 4.) Dr. Athans was crystal clear that her 18 summary of the historic facts described Ms. Van Houten at the time of the murders 19 and that those same factors are not present today. (Exh. 1, at p. 11.)

20 In reversing the grant of parole, Governor Newsom concluded that Ms. Van 21 Houten “must do more to develop her understanding of the factors that caused her 22 to seek acceptance from such a negative, violent influence, and perpetrate extreme 23 acts of wanton violence.” (Exh. 2, at p. 4.) He gave no guidance regarding what Ms.
24 Van Houten “must do” beyond the exhaustive rehabilitative programming she has 25 already done.
26
27

REQUEST FOR RELIEF

WHEREFORE, Petitioner respectfully asks this Court to:

- (1) Grant this Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus on the finding that the Governor’s reversal not supported by the evidence or legal standard; or
- (2) Issue an order directing Respondent to show cause why the petition should not be granted; and
- (3) Find the Governor is equitably estopped from asserting reasons to deny parole that were not raised in the 2016 reversal; and
- (4) Order the immediate release of the Charles “Tex” Watson tapes to counsel for Ms. Van Houten; and
- (4) Find that Ms. Van Houten is suitable for parole and order her immediate placement on parole without remanding the matter to the Governor (In re Masoner (2009) 179 Cal.App.4th 1531, 1538), and
- (5) Grant any other such further relief as the Court deems just and proper.

Dated: June 8, 2021

Respectfully submitted,

 Rich Pfeiffer
 Attorney for Leslie Van Houten

VERIFICATION

I, Rich Pfeiffer, declare:

1. I am an attorney licensed to practice law before the courts of the State of California, with a State Bar Number of 189416.
2. I make this verification because petitioner is incarcerated in a county different from my business address of P.O. Box 721, Silverado, CA 92676. In addition, I am more familiar with the legal allegations in the petition and thus in a better position to declare that the information in the petition is true on my information and belief.
3. I have read the records of the Board’s hearing and decision. I also have read all of the exhibits attached to the petition. I believe the contents of the petition to be a true and accurate representation of these records.

I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the State of California that the attested allegations are true. Executed on June 8, 2021, at Los Angeles, California.

1 MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES

3 THE GOVERNOR'S REVERSAL VIOLATED PETITIONER'S 4 STATE AND FEDERAL RIGHTS OF CONSTITUTIONAL DUE 5 PROCESS.

7
8 A. Procedural and Substantive Due Process Applies to Parole 9 Decisions.

11 California's parole scheme creates a cognizable liberty interest in an inmate's 12 release on parole. This interest is protected by the procedural safeguards of the 13 Due Process Clause of the United States Constitution. (U.S. Const., 5th & 14th 14 amends.) Generally, federal due process is satisfied when the prisoner is given 15 notice of the parole hearing and an opportunity to be heard. If parole is denied, due 16 process further requires a statement of the reasons for the denial. (Greenholtz v.
17 Inmates of Neb. Pen. & Corr. Complex (1979) 442 U.S. 1; see also Morrissey v.
18 Brewer (1972) 408 U.S. 471, 481; accord In re Rosencrantz (2002) 29 Cal.4th 616, 19 655.)

20 An inmate's liberty interest in parole is likewise protected under the broader 21 due process guarantees of the California constitution. (Cal. Const, art. 1, § 7, subd, 22 (a), 15; People v. Ramirez (1979) 25 Cal.3d 260, 266-269.) The California Supreme 23 Court long ago recognized that freedom from arbitrary adjudicative procedures is a 24 substantive component of an individual's liberty interests. (People v. Ramirez, 25 supra, 25 Cal.3d at pp. 266-269.) In criticizing and rejecting the restrictive federal
27

1 approach, which conditions due process protections on statutorily created interests, 2 our high court in Ramirez held “when an individual is subjected to deprivatory 3 governmental action, he always has a due process liberty interest both in fair and 4 unprejudiced decision-making and in being treated with respect and dignity.” 5 (Ibid.) Accordingly, the California Constitution recognizes both substantive and 6 procedural due process interests in parole. (In re Rosenkrantz, supra, 29 Cal.4th at 7 pp. 676-677; People v. Ramirez, supra, 25 Cal.3d at p. 268; In re Powell (1988) 45
8 Cal.3d 894, 904.)

9 Before an inmate may receive a parole date, the Board must find the inmate 10 suitable for parole. In murder cases, the Governor has authority to reverse a grant 11 of parole. The Board and Governor are equally bound by the requirements of 12 constitutional due process in making parole decisions. (Pen. Code, § 3041; Cal.
13 Code Regs. tit. 15, §§ 2401, 2281; In re Rosenkrantz, supra, 29 Cal.4th at p. 655.) 14 Due process is satisfied if the assessment of the inmate’s current risk of danger is 15 supported by "some evidence" in the record. (In re Dannenberg, supra, 34 Cal.4th at 16 p. 1091; see § 3041, subd. (b).)

17 The “some evidence” standard derives from the United States Supreme 18 Court’s decision in Walpole v. Hill (1985) 472 U.S. 445, in which the high Court 19 addressed judicial review of a prison disciplinary proceeding. In balancing the 20 prisoner’s due process right to a decision that is neither arbitrary nor capricious 21 against the institution’s interest in running a safe prison, due process minimally 22 requires that the disciplinary board’s findings be supported by “some evidence” in 23 the record. (Id., at p. 454.)

24 Two years after the United States Supreme Court established the “some 25 evidence” standard, the California Supreme Court imported the standard into 26
27

1 parole decisions. In In re Powell, supra, 45 Cal.3d 894, the California Supreme 2 Court held for the first time that parole decisions must comport with due process, 3 and that due process is met if there is “some evidence in the record” supporting the 4 decision. (Id., at p. 904.)

5 In 2002, the California Supreme Court applied the “some evidence” standard 6 to parole suitability hearings. In In re Rosenkrantz, supra, 29 Cal.4th 616, the 7 court began by acknowledging the Board’s broad discretion in rendering parole 8 suitability decisions, and that appellate courts cannot apply a de novo standard of 9 review to such decisions. (Id., at p. 679; In re Dannenberg, supra, 34 Cal.4th at p.
10 1082.) While acknowledging this deferential standard of review, the Rosenkrantz 11 court admonished that judicial review of suitability decisions is not merely pro 12 forma. In reviewing a decision that an inmate is unsuitable for parole, “the judicial 13 branch is authorized to review the factual basis of a decision of the Board denying 14 parole in order to ensure that the decision comports with the requirements of due 15 process of law.” (In re Rosenkrantz, supra, 29 Cal.4th at p. 658.) The decision 16 comports with due process if there is “some evidence in the record before the 17 [decision maker] supporting the decision to deny parole, based on the factors 18 specified by statute and regulation.” (Id., at p. 658.)

19 Courts also must ensure that the evidence meeting the “some evidence” 20 standard is both reliable and of a solid value. (Id., at p. 655; see Cal. Code. Regs., 21 tit. 15, § 2402, subd. (b).) It is not sufficient to derive findings from a silent or 22 misconstrued record. Reviewing courts additionally must determine if the decision 23 maker gave the inmate “individualized consideration of all relevant factors,” and 24 that the conclusion was neither arbitrary nor capricious. (In re Rosenkrantz, supra, 25 29 Cal.4th at p. 655; In re DeLuna (2005) 126 Cal.App.4th 585; see U.S. Const., 26
27

1 amends. V, XIV; Cal. Const., art. I, § 7, subd. (a).)

2 Applying this standard to the process for assessing a life prisoner's suitability 3 for parole, section 3041, subdivision (b)(1) provides that the parole decision maker 4 "shall grant parole to an inmate unless it determines that the gravity of the current 5 convicted offense or offenses, or the timing and gravity of current or past convicted 6 offense or offenses, is such that consideration of the public safety requires a more 7 lengthy period of incarceration for this individual." (§ 3041, subd. (b)(1).) "As a 8 result, parole applicants have a due process liberty interest in parole and an 9 expectation that they will be granted parole unless the Board finds, in the exercise 10 of its discretion, that they are unsuitable for parole in light of the circumstances 11 specified by statute and by regulation." (In re Lawrence (2008) 44 Cal.4th 1181, 12 1191, 1204, quoting In re Rosenkrantz, supra, 29 Cal.4th at p. 654; In re Stoneroad
13 (2013) 215 Cal.App.4th 596, 615.)

15 B. The Governor Violated Ms. Van Houten's Rights of Constitutional 16 Due Process by Reversing the Board's Fourth Grant of Parole Without 17 Providing Her With a Meaningful Opportunity to Be Heard and Basing His 18 Decision on a Misconstrued Record.

20 The Governor, without question, had the legal authority to reverse the 21 Board's fourth grant of parole, provided the decision complied with due process and 22 the controlling legal standard. It did not. Ms. Van Houten was not allowed to 23 appear before the Governor and personally demonstrate her suitability. This 24 violated the procedural due process guarantee of a meaningful opportunity to be 25 heard.

1 The Governor's grant of discretion under state statutory law allowed him to 2 reverse Ms. Van Houten's grant of parole if he found her currently unsuitable. The 3 substantive due process requirement of a fundamentally fair proceeding compelled 4 the Governor to impartially consider all of the evidence and make a decision based 5 on evidence accurately construed. (Gagnon v. Scarpelli, supra, 411 U.S. at pp. 786-6 787.) The Governor failed to discharge this burden by focusing nearly exclusively 7 on the gravity of the commitment murders without articulating a nexus between 8 the murder and Ms. Van Houten's current circumstances. He also misconstrued the 9 evidence supporting the reversal.

10 During the 2020 parole hearing, the commissioners asked Ms. Van Houten to 11 describe how it felt to stab Mrs. LaBianca. She responded that, "It was a horrible, 12 predatory feeling." The Governor found this description to be inconsistent with Ms.
13 Van Houten's conduct immediately after the murders, when she is said to have 14 called the murders "fun," and continued to follow Manson until her arrest. (Exh. 2, 15 p. 4.) This, according to the Governor, indicated gaps in her "insight or candor, or 16 both, which bear on her current risk for dangerousness." (Exh. 2, p. 4.) In other 17 words, the Governor found no difference between Ms. Van Houten's view of the 18 murders 50 years ago at the age of 19 while such was under the control of a 19 dangerous cult, and her perspective of the murders today as a 71-year-old woman 20 who has undergone five decades of therapy and rehabilitative programming.

21 Ms. Van Houten's statement that stabbing Ms. LaBianca was a "horrible and 22 predatory feeling" was from the perspective of her current recollection of the 23 murders after 50 years of intensive psychotherapy and rehabilitative programming.
24 The Board correctly interpreted this recollection as proving Ms. Van Houten has 25 gained insight into her conduct and faced the harsh reality of her actions rather 26

1 than minimizing her responsibility. It is a measure of her growth rather than a 2 lifelong brand of undue danger.

3 The Governor misconstrued Dr. Athans' analysis of Ms. Van Houten's 4 "historic" personality factors as evidence of her current unsuitability for parole.
5 The "Historic Factors" section of Dr. Athans' CRA listed several post convection 6 attributes of Ms. Van Houten, including "prior violence, violent attitude, other 7 antisocial behavior, troubled relationships, traumatic experiences, and substance 8 abuse problems." (Exh. 1, p. 11.) The Governor found these factors to "remain 9 salient despite Ms. Van Houten's advanced age and remain cause for concern 10 should she be released into the community." (Exh. 2, p. 4.) This conclusion 11 constitutes error for several reasons. First, it presumes a person cannot change for 12 the better in 51 years. Second, it ignores the large body of law describing the 13 diminished culpability of youthful offenders and their remarkable ability to reform.
14 (Pen. Code, § 4801, subd. (c); People v. Franklin, supra, 63 Cal.4th at p. 268.) The 15 law defining the hallmarks of youth was something the Governor was assumed to 16 understand and apply.

17 The third problem with the Governor's reliance on Dr. Athans's summary of 18 the historic factors is that it misstates Dr. Athans's evaluation and conclusion.

19 The Governor relies on Dr. Athans's summary of the historic factors as 20 follows,

21 The evaluating psychologist noted that several historical 22 factors including "prior violence, violent attitude, other 23 antisocial behavior, troubled relationships, traumatic 24 experiences, and substance abuse problems are present and 25

1 relevant to future risk of violent recidivism.” These factors 2 remain salient despite Ms. Van Houten’s advanced age and 3 remain cause for concern should she be released into the 4 community.

6 (Exh. 2, at p. 4.)

7 The portion of the CRA referred to by the Governor is contained in the section 8 entitled “Analysis of Historic Factors.” It states in relevant part,

9
10 Ms. Van Houten displayed the presence of predictive factors 11 for future dangerous behavior within this domain, including 12 prior violence, violent attitude, other antisocial behavior, 13 troubled relationships, substance abuse problems, and 14 traumatic experiences. The risk factors, major mental 15 disorder, personality disorder, employment problems, and 16 treatment and supervisions [sic] response, are not currently 17 present or relevant to violence risk.

19 (Exh. 1, p. 11 [emphasis added].)

20 Dr. Athans acknowledged that the risk factors of “prior violence, violent 21 attitude, other antisocial behavior, troubled relationships, traumatic experiences, 22 and substance abuse problems” are present in Ms. Van Houten’s prior behavior and 23 relevant in determining her future risk of violent recidivism. (Exh. 1, p. 11.) In 24 analyzing the current significance of the historic factors, Dr. Athans states
27

1 Ms. Van Houten has a history of engaging in impulsive 2 behavior, including drug use and promiscuity, and her 3 involvement in the life crime reflected a callous lack of 4 empathy for the victims. Nonetheless, absent are a number 5 of characteristics commonly seen in psychopathic 6 individuals. For nearly 50 years, she has exhibited prosocial
7 behaviors and has sought positive relationships with others.
8 She has not shown herself to be deceptive, conning, or to 9 lack remorse. Her total PCL-R score was below the mean of 10 North American female inmates and below the cutoff or 11 threshold commonly used to identify dissocial or 12 psychopathic personality.

14 (Exh. 1, pp. 11-12 [emphasis added].)

15 Dr. Athans's conclusion regarding the clinical factors present in Ms. Van 16 Houten's case is as follows,

18 Ms. Van Houten demonstrated insight into the contributing 19 factors of the life crime and was able to adequately discuss 20 the causative factors involved. Over the years, she has 21 participated extensively in self-help programs, including 22 individual therapy, which have helped her understand the 23 pertinent factors that allowed her to become involved in the 24 life crime. Although she spoke of her susceptibility to the 25 influence of Manson, she also wished to take full

1                   responsibility for her behavior without minimizing her role 2                   or externalizing blame. Ms. Van Houten's expressions of 3                   remorse for the victims appeared genuine. At present, the 4                   risk factor, lack of insight, is not present.

6 (Exh. 1, at p. 12 [emphasis added].)

7                   Under the subtitle. “Risk of Future Violence: Case Formulation and 8 Opinions” Dr. Athans summarized her findings as follows:

9 10                   Ms. Van Houten is nearly 70-years old and has been incarcerated for 11 almost 50 years. During that time period, she has not engaged in 12 violence, she has largely abided by the rules of the institution having 13 been issued one 115 in 1981, and she has participated in numerous 14 hours of therapy, treatment groups, and self-help programs. She has 15 addressed issues of sobriety and has made a concerted effort to 16 understand what prompted her to engage in the life crime. She 17 accepted responsibility for her behavior without minimizing her role or 18 externalizing blame and although she recognized the impact of her 19 emotional functioning on her behavior, she wished to clarify that she 20 alone was responsible for her involvement in the crime. At present, she 21 appears to represent a low risk for violent recidivism.

23 (Exh. 1, at pp. 11-12.)

24                   When read in context, it is not possible to interpret Dr. Athans’s evaluation as 25 concluding Ms. Van Houten currently poses an unreasonable risk of violence. The 26
27

1 doctor contrasted the 19-year-old girl she was to the rehabilitated 71-year-old 2 woman she is today. The doctor unequivocally concluded that Ms. Van Houten is 3 fully rehabilitated and does not present an unreasonable risk of danger to the 4 public if released on parole. (Exh. 1.)

5 The Governor violated Ms. Van Houten’s rights of substantive due process by 6 misconstruing Ms. Van Houten’s testimony at the parole hearing, as well as Dr.
7 Athans’s psychological evaluation. The Governor placed undue emphasis on 8 isolated and unsupported “facts” tending to show unsuitability, rather than 9 assessing Ms. Van Houten’s entire circumstances in determining if she met the 10 overarching question of whether she currently poses an unreasonable risk of danger 11 to public safety. It is well established that the Governor’s decision must “reflect[ ] 12 due consideration of the specified factors as applied to the individual prisoner in 13 accordance with applicable legal standards.” (In re Shaputis (2011) 53 Cal.4th 192, 14 210 (Shaputis II); In re Lawrence, supra, 44 Cal.4th at p. 1204; In re Shaputis
15 (2008) 44 Cal.4th 1241, 1260–1261 (Shaputis I); In re Rosenkrantz, supra, 29 16 Cal.4th at p. 677; In re Shelton (2020) 52 Cal.App.5th 595, 607-608; In re Stoneroad, 17 supra, 215 Cal.App.4th at p. 616.) He violated this legal mandate.

18 “[I]n cases where psychological evaluations consistently indicate that an 19 inmate poses a low risk of danger to society, a contrary conclusion must be based on 20 more than a hunch or mere belief that he should gain more insight into his past 21 behavior.” The Governor must point to evidence from which it is reasonable to infer 22 that the inmate's current mentality reveals a danger undetected or underestimated 23 in the psychological reports. (Shaputis II, supra, 53 Cal.4th at p. 228 (conc. opn. of 24 Liu J.); In re Young (2012) 204 Cal.App.4th 288, 312; In re Roderick (2007) 154 25 Cal.App.4th 242, 271–272.) The Governor’s decision does not point to such 26
27

1 evidence, nor does explain how his conclusion that Ms. Van Houten “needs to do 2 more” takes into account her consistently low risk assessments.

3 “[A]ll exercises of legal discretion must be grounded in reasoned judgment 4 and guided by legal principles and policies appropriate to the particular matter at 5 issue.” (People v. Russel (1968) 69 Cal.2d 187, 195.) “To exercise the power of 6 judicial discretion all the material facts in evidence must be known and considered, 7 together also with the legal principles essential to an informed, intelligent and just 8 decision.” (Estate of Gilkison (1998) 65 Cal.App.4th 1443, 1448, quoting In re Cortez
9 (1971) 6 Cal.3d 78, 85–86.)

10 The Governor’s decision in this case is based on findings from a misconstrued 11 record. The Governor’s conclusion that Ms. Van Houten “must do more” to prove 12 her suitability neglects to give any guidance as to what more she can do, given that 13 she has done virtually everything possible, and has been doing it for five decades.
14 It is evident there is nothing more Ms. Van Houten can do to overcome the taint of 15 the commitment offense and its connection to Charles Manson. While this may be 16 appropriate for a sentence of life without the possibility of parole, it is a violation of 17 the legal standard for an indeterminate life term. Our Supreme Court long ago 18 denounced the blanket denial of parole as a violation of constitutional due process.
19 (In re Rosencrantz (2000) 29 Cal.4th 616, 655, 682; In re DeLuna (2005) 126 20 Cal.App.4th 585; see U.S. Const., amends. V, XIV; Cal. Const., art. I, § 7, subd. (a).) 21 The Governor’s flawed decision should be reversed and Ms. Van Houten’s grant of 22 parole reinstated.

II.

THE GOVERNOR ERRED IN FINDING THAT MS. VAN HOUTEN CURRENTLY POSES AN UNREASONABLE RISK OF DANGER TO PUBLIC SAFETY BY FAILING TO ASSESS HER OVERALL CIRCUMSTANCES UNDER THE PROPER LEGAL STANDARD.

A. The Standard of Review.

1. The “some evidence” standard of review.

A parole decision by the Governor must be based on the same factors the Board is required to consider. Constitutional due process requires that the decision be supported by “some evidence” in the record. (In re Shaputis (2011) 53 Cal.4th 192, 221 (Shaputis II); In re Rosenkrantz, supra, 29 Cal.4th at pp. at pp. 676–677.) Although the precise manner in which the Governor balances the relevant factors lies within the Governor’s discretion, “the decision must reflect an individualized consideration of the specified criteria and cannot be arbitrary or capricious.” (Ibid.) “[T]he aggravated nature of the crime does not in and of itself provide some evidence of current dangerousness to the public unless the record also establishes that something in the prisoner's pre or post incarceration history, or his or her current demeanor and mental state, indicates that the implications regarding the prisoner's dangerousness that derive from his or her commission of the commitment offense remain probative to the statutory determination of a continuing threat to public safety.” (In re Lawrence, supra, 44 Cal.4th at p. 1214, italics in original.)

Appellate courts independently review the entire record to determine

1 “whether the identified facts are probative to the central issue of current 2 dangerousness when considered in light of the full record before . . . the Governor.”
3 (In re Lawrence, at p. 1221.) To meet this standard of review, the Governor’s 4 decision must establish a nexus between the suitability factor and the finding of 5 currently dangerous that is based on an application of the proper legal standard to 6 an accurate interpretation of the material facts. (In re Rosenkrantz, supra, 29 7 Cal.4th at p. 677; In re Lawrence, supra, 44 Cal.4th at p. 1204; In re Shaputis
8 (2008) 44 Cal.4th 1241, 1260–1261 (Shaputis I); In re Stoneroad, supra, 215 9 Cal.App.4th at p. 616.) Thus, “[t]he proper articulation of the standard of review is 10 whether there exists ‘some evidence’ demonstrating that an inmate poses a current 11 threat to public safety, rather than merely some evidence suggesting the existence 12 of a statutory factor of unsuitability.” (In re Lawrence, supra, 44 Cal.4th at p. 1191; 13 Shaputis II, supra, 53 Cal.4th at p. 209.)

14 The Governor’s decision is subject to a reversal if it “does not reflect due 15 consideration of all relevant statutory and regulatory factors or is not supported by 16 a modicum of evidence in the record rationally indicative of current dangerousness, 17 not mere guesswork.” (Ibid.) The some evidence standard is violated if the 18 Governor merely proves the existence of a statutory factor of unsuitability without 19 balancing that factor against the conclusion of a current unreasonable risk of 20 danger.

21 2. De novo review is appropriate in this case.

24 Based on the absence of evidence supporting the Governor’s reversal, this 25 case triggers the Court’s interpretation of law, rather than the examination of 26

1 disputed facts. In a habeas corpus proceeding, “the court may grant (or deny) the 2 relief sought without ordering an evidentiary hearing as long as resolution of the 3 petition does not depend on any disputed issue of fact.” (In re Zepeda (2006) 141
4 Cal.App.4th 1493, 1497.)

5 In this case, the Governor’s factual findings that Ms. Van Houten gave 6 inconsistent testimony, and his contention that Dr. Athans’s analysis of the historic 7 psychological factors proved that Ms. Van Houten remains a current risk of danger 8 are not supported by the record. Further, the Governor’s continued reliance on the 9 gravity of the commitment offense is a legally invalid basis upon which to deny 10 parole when balanced against Ms. Van Houten’s proven rehabilitation for the past 11 50 years. (In re Lawrence, supra, 44 Cal.4th at p. 1191.)

12 Moreover, Ms. Van Houten qualified for parole under three separate legal 13 categories, each of which required the Governor to give “great weight” to these 14 ameliorating factors. Ms. Van Houten qualified as a youthful offender, obligating 15 the Governor to give great weight to the effect of the hallmarks of youth on her 16 culpability. (§ 3051; People v. Franklin (2016) 63 Cal.4th 261.) She also qualified 17 as a victim of intimate partner battering because of her cohabitation relationship 18 with Manson, during which he physically, psychologically, and sexually abused her.
19 Her age qualified her for release under Elderly Parole Program. (§ 3055.)

20 The Board gave great weight to these three categories in concluding that Ms.
21 Van Houten is suitable for release on parole. In contrast, while the Governor 22 claimed to give “great weight” to the youthful offender criteria, his conclusory 23 decision does not analyze how the hallmarks of youth factored into Ms. Van Houten 24 level of culpability. (Exh. 2, p 2.) He entirely failed to consider Ms. Van Houten’s 25 status as a battered intimate partner or how her advanced age favorably impacted 26
27

1 her parole suitability.

2 Further, the petition raises the legal issue of the Governor’s misapplication of 3 the law to a long-established factual record. There is nothing new in the record 4 from Ms. Van Houten’s last three parole hearings, other than stronger reasons to 5 grant her parole. This implicates a mixed issue of law and facts. De novo review is 6 the standard when a mixed question of law and fact implicates constitutional 7 rights. (People v. Cromer (2001) 24 Cal.4th 889, 894; see Sanchez v. California 8 (2009) 179 Cal.App.4th 467, 486.) These principles of review apply to a petition for 9 habeas corpus. (In re Rosenkrantz, supra, 29 Cal.4th at p. 677.)

10 The standard of review by this Court must be something more than just 11 “some evidence” supporting the Governor’s conclusion. The Court should undertake 12 de novo review in this case.

13 14 B. The Governing Legal Framework.

15 The California Supreme Court’s 2008 decision in In re Lawrence, supra, 44 16 Cal.4th 1181, provides the foundational legal framework for the standard of proof in 17 parole decisions. The high court in Lawrence reversed the Governor’s finding that 18 Ms. Lawrence was not suitable for parole on the ground that “some evidence” did 19 not support the Governor’s determination that Ms. Lawrence currently posed an 20 unreasonable risk of danger to public safety. (In re Lawrence, supra, 44 Cal.4th at 21 p. 1191.) The defendant in Lawrence shot her lover’s wife four times then stabbed 22 the wife to death with a potato peeler after becoming enraged when the husband 23 ended his extra martial affair with the defendant. After committing the murder the 24 defendant told her family the murder was a birthday present to herself then fled 25

1 the state. (Id., at p. 1193.) Eleven years later, the defendant voluntarily returned 2 to California and surrendered herself to the authorities, but denied involvement in 3 the murder. In 1983, she was convicted of first degree murder and sentenced to an 4 indeterminate life sentence. (Id., at p. 1190.)

5 Like Ms. Van Houten, Ms. Lawrence received positive psychological 6 evaluations during the last decade of her incarceration. (Id., at p. 1195.) Also like 7 Ms. Van Houten, Ms. Lawrence remained free of serious discipline violations 8 throughout her incarceration and contributed to the prison community in a variety 9 of ways. She participated in many educational groups and earned Bachelor and 10 Master degrees in prison. (Id., at p. 1194.) Again like Ms. Van Houten, the 11 Governor reversed Ms. Lawrence's fourth consecutive grant of parole. In 12 reinstating the Board's decision, the Supreme Court in Lawrence found the 13 Governor's decision unsupported by the evidence or proper legal standard.

14 The Governor in Lawrence based his decision primarily on the gravity of the 15 commitment evidence, with the contributing factors of Ms. Lawrence's initial lack of 16 remorse, early negative psychological evaluations, and eight counseling "chronos" 17 for minor prison violations. (Id., at p. 1199) In analyzing these factors, the 18 Supreme Court found that, though each factor was historically true, none of the 19 factors applied to Ms. Lawrence's current behavior, nor had the Governor cited a 20 nexus between the historic factors and Ms. Lawrence's current circumstances. The 21 Supreme Court held that a finding of parole unsuitability requires proof that the 22 inmate currently poses an unreasonable risk of danger to public safety. (Id., at p.
23 1191.) Lawrence established that the relevant inquiry in parole decisions is, 24 "whether the circumstances of the commitment offense, when considered in light of 25 other facts in the record, are such that they continue to be predictive of current 26
27

1 dangerousness many years after the commission of the offense.” (Id., at p. 1235.)
2 This inquiry is an “individualized one, and cannot be undertaken simply by 3 examining the circumstances of the crime in isolation, without consideration of the 4 passage of time” or other mitigating factors. (Ibid.)

5 The Lawrence court found Ms. Lawrence suitable for parole even though she 6 shot her lover’s wife and stabbed her to death with a vegetable peeler, after which 7 she characterized the murder as a birthday present to herself. Psychological 8 evaluations found her to be mildly psychotic, and that she initially showed no 9 remorse for the murder. (Id., at p. 1199.) The court found that the factors relied 10 upon by the Governor in denying parole were overcome by Ms. Lawrence’s record of 11 rehabilitation in prison. (Ibid.) The legal standard applied to Ms. Lawrence proves 12 Ms. Van Houten too is suitable for parole because she currently does not pose an 13 unreasonable risk of danger to public safety.

14
15 C. None of the Factors Cited by the Governor Prove Ms. Van Houten 16 Currently Poses an Unreasonable Risk of Danger.

17 18 In assessing Ms. Van Houten’s suitability for parole, the Governor was 19 required to go beyond the question of whether some evidence supported the 20 unsuitability factors he cited. The governing legal standard compelled him to 21 decide if some evidence supported the core determination of whether Ms. Van 22 Houten’s release to parole would unreasonably endanger public safety. (In re 23 Lawrence, supra, at p. 1209, italics added.) The Governor’s decision failed to meet 24 this standard.

1. Gravity of the commitment offense.

The Governor’s primary reason for reversing Ms. Van Houten’s grant of parole is the gravity of the commitment offense and her membership in the Manson cult. (Exh. 2, at pp. 3-4.) Immutable historic facts, such as egregious details of the commitment offense, lose their predictive value over time because they do not account for the inmate’s intervening reform. (In re Lawrence, supra, 44 Cal.4th at p. 1191.) Where the record is replete with evidence establishing an inmate’s rehabilitation, remorse, and current psychological health, balanced against a record devoid of evidence that the inmate currently poses a threat to public safety, the inmate’s due process rights are violated by relying on immutable and unchangeable circumstances in denying a grant of parole. (Id. at p. 1227.) The parole decision does not depend upon whether the commitment offense was an exceptionally brutal murder. The Supreme Court has repeatedly established that “the determination of whether an inmate poses a current danger is not dependent upon whether his or her commitment offense is more or less egregious than other, similar crimes. (Id., at p. 1221; In re Dannenberg, supra, 34 Cal.4th at pp. 1083–1084, 1095; see In re Shaputis, supra, 44 Cal.4th at p. 1254.) “Focus upon whether a petitioner’s crime was ‘particularly egregious’ in comparison to other murders in other cases is not called for by the statutes, which contemplate an individualized assessment of an inmate’s suitability for parole . . . .” (In re Lawrence, supra, 44 Cal.4th at p. 1217.) The determination of current dangerousness does not depend “upon whether the circumstances of the offense exhibit viciousness above the minimum elements required for conviction of that offense.” (In re Shaputis, supra, 44 Cal.4th at p. 1254.)

1 All murders are egregious crimes involving extreme violence. This does not 2 preclude parole where the defendant is sentenced to an indeterminate life term.
3 Many individuals convicted of egregious murders have been found suitable under 4 the legal standard that they no longer pose an unreasonable risk of danger to public 5 safety. (See, e.g., (In re Dannenberg (2005) 34 Cal.4th 1061, 1069; In re Dannenberg 6 (2009) 173 Cal.App.4th 237, 241; In re MacDonald (2010) 189 Cal.App.4th 1008, 7 1013-1017; In re Moses (2010) 182 Cal.App.4th 1279, 1285-1286; In re Twinn (2010)
8 190 Cal.App.4th 447, 452.)

9 Ms. Van Houten's participation in the LaBianca murders and her 10 membership in the Manson cult more than 50 years ago are immutable facts she 11 can never change, regardless of the amount of rehabilitation or positive 12 programming she has accomplished. The Supreme Court in Lawrence 13 acknowledged that, "in rare circumstances, the aggravated nature of the crime 14 alone can provide a valid basis for denying parole, even when there is strong 15 evidence of rehabilitation and no other evidence of current dangerousness." (Ibid.) 16 The court continued by explaining that the gravity of the commitment offense, as 17 an immutable and unchangeable circumstance, must have a nexus between the 18 elevated circumstances of the commitment murder and the inmate's current 19 circumstances in order for it to support a conclusion that those same factors are 20 present in the inmate's current behavior. (In re Lawrence, supra, at pp. 1181, 1221; 21 In re Stoneroad (2013) 215 Cal.App.4th 596, 614, 617.) The result of Lawrence and 22 its progeny is that the aggravating nature of a crime can no longer provide evidence 23 of current dangerousness "unless there is also evidence that there is something 24 about the commitment offense which suggests the inmate still presents a threat to 25 public safety." (In re Denham (2012) 211 Cal.App.4th 702, 715, citing In re 26
27

1 Lawrence, supra, at p. 1214; In re Stoneroad, supra, 215 Cal.App.4th at p. 621.)
2 Since Lawrence, no published case has found that a rehabilitated inmate remains 3 unsuitable for parole based solely on the gravity of a commitment murder.

4 The presiding commissioner at Ms. Van Houten's 2020 parole hearing 5 addressed the current impact of the commitment murders by finding she no longer 6 posed the risk factors present at the time of the murders. (Exh. 3, at p.116.) The 7 Board found no nexus between Ms. Van Houten's commitment offense and her 8 current risk of danger. (Exh. 3, at p. 119. ) According to the Board, her many years 9 of positive reform has purged those factors from the person she is today.

10 The Governor's reversal contradicted the legal standard requiring a nexus to 11 a petitioner's current circumstances. He began by describing Charles Manson, 12 Manson's cult, Manson's apocalyptic vision of a race war called "Helter Skelter," 13 and Ms. Van Houten's membership in the cult at the age of 19. (Exh. 2, at p. 1) 14 The Governor's second paragraph describes the Tate murders. He does not describe 15 the LaBianca murders until the third paragraph. (Exh. 2, at pp. 1-2.)

16 The Governor concludes his decision by stating,

18 Given the extreme nature of the crime in which she was 19 involved, I do not believe she has sufficiently demonstrated 20 that she has come to terms with the totality of the factors
21 that led her to participate in the vicious Manson Family
22 killings. Before she can be safely released, Ms. Van Houten
23 must do more to develop her understanding of the factors
24 that caused her to seek acceptance from such a negative, 25 violent influence, and perpetrate extreme acts of wanton
26 violence.

1 (Exh.2, at p. 4.) He gives no indication of what more Ms. Van Houten must do to 2 prove her suitability.

3 The Governor's description of Manson, his vision of Helter Skelter, and the 4 more vicious Tate murder was a way of bolstering the gravity of Ms. Van Houten's 5 involvement in the La Bianca killings. Certainly the LaBianca murders were 6 terrible, as are all murders, but the Governor's attempt to augment the facts with 7 the brutality of the Tate murders must be disregarded.

8 Further, the Governor failed to cite a single circumstance from Ms. Van 9 Houten's participation in the LaBianca murders or membership in the Manson cult 10 that remains uncorrected today, given her 50 years of psychological therapy and 11 rehabilitative programming. The Governor erred by placing primary emphasis on 12 the gravity of the commitment murders and Ms. Van Houten's connection to 13 Charles Manson in finding her unsuitable for parole.

15 2. Inconsistency between Ms. Van Houten's 16 description of the murders in 1968 and 17 today.

18 19 The body of the Governor's decision states his reasons for reversing the 20 Board's grant of parole. First, he found Ms. Van Houten's detailed explanation of 21 why she allowed herself to become vulnerable to Manson and his cult 22 "unsatisfying." He expressed concern over Ms. Van Houten's explanation that her 23 involvement in the LaBianca murder stemmed from a desperate need for 24 acceptance by Manson and the cult, with the Governor describing the murders as 25 "part of a series of crimes that rank among the most infamous and fear-inducing in 26
27

1 California history.” Once again, the Governor improperly combines the Tate and La 2 Bianca murders to support his decision.

3 The Governor continues by describing Ms. Van Houten’s current description 4 of the crimes as “horrible” and “predatory” is inconsistent with her describing the 5 killings as “fun” to a fellow cult member in 1969, and the fact she remained with 6 Manson until her arrest. The governor found “inconsistency” and “gaps in Ms. Van 7 Houten’s insight or candor, or both, which bear on her current risk for 8 dangerousness.” (Exh. 2, at p. 4.) This finding is not supported by the evidence.
9 Ms. Van Houten’s description of the killings as horrible and predatory was from her 10 perspective of a 71-year-old woman looking back after 50 years of therapy. She 11 commented that the killings were “fun” when she was 19 and under the influence of 12 a dangerous cult. The inconsistency noted by the Governor is a measure of Ms. Van 13 Houten’s current rehabilitation. It does not provide a nexus between her mentality 14 at the time of the murders and her current risk of danger.

15 3. Historic factors from the CRA.

16
17 The Governor continues by describing the “historical factors” cited by Dr.
18 Athans in the 2018 CRA of “prior violence, violent attitude, other antisocial 19 behavior, troubled relationships, traumatic experiences, and substance abuse 20 problems” to be “present and relevant to [Ms. Van Houten’s] future risk of violent 21 recidivism.” The Governor found these same factors “salient despite Ms. Van 22 Houten’s advanced age and remain cause for concern should she be released into 23 the community.” (Exh. 2, at p. 3-4.) This finding misconstrued the record. Dr.
24 Athans made it very clear that the historic factors described in the CRA were 25
26
27

1 present in Ms. Van Houten’s mentality from the age of 14 up to the time of the 2 LaBianca murders when she was 19. (Exh. 1, at p. 11.) Dr. Athans was required to 3 consider these factors in assessing Ms. Van Houten’s suitability for parole. The 4 doctor concluded these factors, “are not currently present or relevant to violence 5 risk.” (Exh. 1, at p. 11.) Thus, the historic factors do not support the Governor’s 6 finding of current dangerousness.

7 As demonstrated above, none of the factors relied on by the Governor provide 8 some evidence of Ms. Van Houten’s current dangerousness. Even assuming there is 9 evidence supporting a given unsuitability factor, which petitioner does not concede, 10 none of the factors provide the critical nexus between the factor and Ms. Van 11 Houten’s current unreasonable risk of danger to the public. (See: Stoneroad, at pp.
12 621-622; In re Shaputis (2008) 44 Cal.4th 1241, (Shaputis I.) This omission 13 rendered the Governor’s reversal a violation of state statutory law, and a violation 14 of constitutional due process.

15 16 D. Ms. Van Houten’s Overall Circumstances Establish That She 17 Meets the Standard for Parole Suitability.

18 19 Ms. Van Houten’s conviction arose from stabbing Mrs. La Bianca, after which 20 she purportedly told a fellow cult member it was “fun.” The Board found Ms. Van 21 Houten’s crimes and her initial lack of remorse overcome by her remarkable record 22 of rehabilitation. She has undergone extensive psychological therapy. The success 23 of her therapy can be seen in the 27 CRAs, and the unanimous conclusions 24 beginning in 1978 that she was not violent and presented a low risk of violent 25 recidivism if she was released on parole. (See Exh. 1, at pp.7-8, 17-18.) 26
27

1 Since 1976, Ms. Van Houten has been free of all drugs and alcohol and 2 continues to participate in substance abuse rehabilitation programs. (Exh. 3, at pp.
3 56-58.) A sampling of the programs she has completed include Self-Management 4 and Recovery Training (SMART); Inside out; Suicide Prevention Committee; 5 Narcotics Anonymous (NA); Business Smarts; Helping Women Recover; Advanced 6 Trauma; Victim Offender Education Group (VOEG); Actor's Gang Prison Project; 7 and Victim Offender Reconciliation Program. (See, e.g., Exh. 3, 56-58, 67.) Ms. Van 8 Houten has also engaged in one-on-one counseling, which helped her develop a 9 deeper understanding of her parents' divorce, the abortion, and her mind set at the 10 time of the murders. (Exh. 3, at pp. 53, 116, 118.)

11 Ms. Van Houten has worked as a tutor for nearly 20 years. She has earned a 12 Bachelor of Arts degree in English Literature, with a minor in psychology. She also 13 earned a Master Degree in the humanities. The subject of her Master's thesis was 14 sustainable rehabilitation and used to this day in clinical applications. (Exh. 3, at 15 pp. 6-7, 115 ) She also has worked as a teaching assistant in the expanding Chaffey 16 College prison program and UCLA's Merits of Change. She has repeatedly served 17 as the chairperson of the Women's Advisory Council, which she counts as one of her 18 hardest, yet most rewarding positions. (Exh. 3, at p. 6, 98.) Her many laudatory 19 chronos are too numerous to list. (Exh. 3, at p. 98.)

20 The Board recognized that Ms. Van Houten has spent the last 50- years 21 agonizing over her criminal conduct and working tirelessly to overcome the damage 22 she has caused. During the parole board hearing, she expressed wrenching remorse 23 for her conduct and provided extensive testimony describing her personal 24 culpability and participation in the Manson cult. Based on this evidence, the Parole 25 Board concluded that petitioner is not the same person as the young woman who 26
27

1 entered prison 50-years-ago.

2 The Governor brushed over these accomplishments and gave little 3 consideration of the way in which Ms. Van Houten's youth contributed to her 4 behavior. By focusing on her past and ignoring the woman she is today, the 5 Governor's reversal failed to establish the requisite evidentiary nexus between Ms.
6 Van Houten's current circumstances and the factors he claimed proved that she 7 remains unsuitable for release to parole. (Shaputis II, supra, 53 Cal.4th at p. 209; 8 In re Prather, supra, 50 Cal.4th at pp. 251-252; In re Lawrence, supra, 44 Cal.4th at 9 p. 1191.)

19 The Governor's refusal to fairly apply the governing legal standard to Ms.
20 Van Houten's individualized circumstances constitutes the imposition of a de facto 21 sentence of life without the possibility of parole. The Governor lacks the authority 22 to change Ms. Van Houten's indeterminate life sentence with a minimum service 23 term of seven years, into a sentence where she never has a meaningful chance at 24 life outside of prison. (See In re Lynch (1972) 8 Cal.3d 410, 414 [if claim of

1 constitutionally excessive punishment is properly presented, it is for the courts, “as 2 coequal guardian[s] of the Constitution, to condemn any violation of that 3 prohibition”). The serial denial of parole can constitute a constitutionally excessive 4 punishment under the Eighth Amendment of the federal Constitution and article I, 5 section 17 of the California Constitution. (In re Palmer (2021) 10 Cal.5th 959, 855-6 956.) This is particularly true where, as here, the inmate qualifies as a youthful 7 offender. (Id., at p. 902 [concurring opn., Liu, J.]; § 3051.) The California Supreme 8 Court in Palmer agreed that habeas corpus relief is available to inmates whose 9 continued incarceration has become constitutionally excessive by the serial denial of 10 parole. (In re Palmer, supra, 10 Cal.5th at p. 974-975.)

11 In general, fixing appropriate penalties for crimes falls within the exclusive 12 province of the Legislature. (See, e.g., People v. Ward (2005) 36 Cal.4th 186, 218; 13 People v. Dillon (1983) 34 Cal.3d 441, 478.) Sentences implicate sensitive questions 14 of policy and values that “are in the first instance for the judgment of the 15 Legislature [or the people] alone.” (In re Lynch, supra, 8 Cal.3d at p. 414.)
16 However, the legislative power to craft punishments is subject to the constraints 17 imposed by the state and federal Constitutions against sentences that constitute 18 cruel and unusual punishment. Defendants may rely on these constitutional 19 provisions to obtain relief from a sentence that was otherwise lawfully imposed.
20 (See Hutto v. Davis (1982) 454 U.S. 370, 374; In re Dannenberg, supra, 34 Cal.4th at 21 p. 1071.) An inmate may challenge the minimum term established by a statute, 22 “without regard to the constitutionality vel non of the maximum.” (In re Lynch, 23 supra, 8 Cal.3d at p. 419, fn. 9.) Inmates also may challenge the constitutionality of 24 the long years of imprisonment the inmate has served. “Life-top inmates may test, 25 in court, whether their continued punishment violates the Constitution” based on
27

1 the serial denial of parole. (In re Palmer II, supra, 10 Cal.5th at p. at 971.)

2 Ms. Van Houten’s continued incarceration for more than 50 years based on a 3 crime she committed as a youthful offender, in which the Board has found her 4 suitable for parole at four consecutive parole hearings is “shocking and offensive” 5 within the meaning of the state and federal Constitutions. (U.S. Const., 8th 6 Amend; Cal. Const., art. I, § 17.) After 30 days of deliberation, the jury was unable 7 to find Ms. Van Houten premeditated and deliberated the murders because of her 8 diminished capacity from Manson’s control and her use of mind-altering drugs.<sup>6</sup> 9 Ms. Van Houten’s third trial resulted in a conviction under the felony murder rule.
10 This meant the jury found her to be vicariously liable. It did not find that Ms. Van 11 Houten acted with premeditation or deliberation in committing the murders.
12 Because of this, the trial court was able to impose concurrent indeterminate life 13 sentences with a minimum service term of seven years. (People v. Van Houten 14 supra, at p. 347.)

15 The sentencing court presided over the trial and heard the evidence 16 supporting Ms. Van Houten’s conviction. At the sentencing hearing, the court gave 17 “serious attention” to sentencing Ms. Van Houten to probation. It ultimately 18 declined to do so because nobody convicted of a first degree murder in California 19 had ever been granted probation. (Exh. 4.) The court awarded Ms. Van Houten

21 <sup>6</sup> Not available to the jury was consideration of diminished capacity for being 22 a youthful offender. The science regarding adolescent brain development has only 23 been recognized in criminal law for around the last 15 years old. This science led to 24 the United States Supreme Court changing how juveniles are sentenced in 2012 in 25 the landmark case Miller v. Alabama (2012) 132 S.Ct. 2455, and since then 26 subsequent United States and California Supreme Court cases extending youthful 27 offender considerations.

1 eight years and 120 days of presentence custody credits, making her eligible for 2 parole at the time of sentencing. (Exh.3, at pp. 3, 95.) Neither side appealed the 3 sentence. The Governor cannot now override this sentence, especially when his 4 motive is based on implementing the will of the voting public.

5 The purpose of parole is to help an inmate “reintegrate into society as 6 constructive individuals as soon as they are able, without being confined for the full 7 term of the sentence imposed.” (Morrissey v. Brewer (1972) 408 U.S. 471, 477.) Ms.
8 Van Houten was sentenced to life with the possibility of parole after a minimum 9 service term of seven years. She has served more than 50 years of that sentence 10 and found suitable for parole after four consecutive parole hearings. The 11 Governor’s refusal to allow parole in Ms. Van Houten’s case not only violates 12 constitutional due process, but it negates the importance of the vital role parole 13 serves in our system of criminal justice.

15 THE GOVERNOR FORFEITED THE ABILITY TO 16 RELY ON THE GRAVITY OF THE COMMITMENT 17 OFFENSE IN 2020 REVERSAL BY FAILING TO CITE 18 THIS AS A FACTOR IN THE 2016 REVERSAL. 19

20 The principle of equitable estoppel prevents the Governor from relying on the 21 gravity of the commitment offense as a reason for denying parole because he did not 22 cite this as a reason in the 2016 reversal.

23 “Generally speaking, four elements must be present in order to apply the 24 doctrine of equitable estoppel: (1) the party to be estopped must be apprised of the 25 facts; (2) he must intend that his conduct shall be acted upon, or must so act that 26

1 the party asserting the estoppel had a right to believe it was so intended; (3) the 2 other party must be ignorant of the true state of facts; and (4) he must rely upon 3 the conduct to his injury.” (Driscoll v. City of Los Angeles (1967) 67 Cal.2d 297, 4 305.)

5 The doctrine of equitable estoppel prevents the Governor from claiming the 6 gravity of Ms. Van Houten’s commitment offense alone is sufficient to reverse a 7 grant of parole based on the Governor’s failure to cite this factor in the 2016 parole
8 reversal. The Governor’s 2016 decision relied almost exclusively on the unsworn 9 statements of Barbara Hoyt. It can reasonably be inferred that the Governor’s 10 decision to omit the gravity of the commitment offense as a factor in his 2016 parole 11 reversal was based on his recognition that Ms. Van Houten’s many years of positive 12 programming negated the predictive value of the commitment offense in assessing 13 her current risk of danger. Because the Governor agreed by this omission that the 14 commitment offense was not a valid reason to reverse the grant of parole in 2016, 15 he should be equitably estopped from resurrecting this as the primary factor for 16 reversing Board’s grant of parole in 2020, particularly where there is no new 17 evidence since 2016 other than Ms. Van Houten’s continued exemplary behavior 18 and rehabilitative programming. The Governor knew of these same facts in 2016 19 and in 2020, thus meeting the first element of equitable estoppel. (Driscoll v. City 20 of Los Angeles, supra, 67 Cal.2d at p. 305.)

21 The second and third elements of equitable estoppel are met because the 22 Governor must have known that if he relied on the gravity of commitment offense 23 as a reason for denying parole in 2016, Ms. Van Houten would have stridently 24 opposed such a finding. The California Supreme Court decided Lawrence in 2008.
25 Its holding requiring a nexus between an inmate’s current circumstances and the 26

1 gravity of the commitment offense as a predicate to relying on this factor in denying 2 parole was the law in 2016, just as it was in 2020. (In re Lawrence, supra, 44 3 Cal.4th at p. 1191.) By omitting this as a basis for denying parole in 2016, Ms. Van 4 Houten assumed the Governor was simply following the holding of Lawrence, 5 because there is no nexus to her current circumstances. Because Ms. Van Houten 6 did not anticipate that the Governor would rely on the gravity of the commitment 7 offense as a basis for denying parole in 2020, after rejecting this theory in 2016, she 8 did not argue against the factor in her opposition to the 2016 reversal. She also did 9 not address this in her 2020 parole, as the issue seemed moot. Thus, she was 10 prejudiced by not addressing an issue she assumed was irrelevant. (Driscoll v. City 11 of Los Angeles, supra, 67 Cal.2d at p. 305.)

12 Fundamental fairness requires that the equitable estoppel doctrine be applied 13 to the Governor's claim that the gravity of the commitment offense compelled the 14 reversal of the Board's grant of parole. Unless the Governor is prevented from 15 mining old evidence to support new parole reversals in hearing after hearing, he 16 will be allowed to improperly change the top-life sentence imposed by the trial court 17 some 50 years ago to a sentence of life without the possibility of parole through 18 repeated parole denials. Equitable principles are a safeguard against this abuse.

MS. VAN HOUTEN WAS DENIED HER RIGHTS OF CONSTITUTIONAL DUE PROCESS WHEN THE PROSECUTION WITHHELD EXCULPATORY EVIDENCE CONTAINED IN THE AUDIO RECORDINGS OF CHARLES “TEX” WATSON (“WATSON TAPES”).

A. Summary of the Argument and Evidence.

Ms. Van Houten was denied access to the Watson Tapes at her 2017 Franklin hearing and all of her parole hearings. A Franklin hearing permits the introduction of evidence regarding the hallmarks of youth by a defendant who qualifies as a youthful offender. (People v. Franklin (2016) 63 Cal.4th at p. 284; § 3051.) The evidence admitted at a Franklin hearing can come from the defendant and prosecution, and is subject to the rules of evidence. (Ibid.)

Ms. Van Houten has been attempting to obtain the Watson Tapes since her parole hearing in 2017. At the beginning of each hearing, she objects to the Watson Tapes not being disclosed despite counsel having filed repeated discovery motions for the disclosure of the tapes. (Exh. 12.) At the 2017 hearing, Ms. Van Houten’s counsel went so far as making a motion to disqualify the entire Office of the District Attorney due to the unfairness of the District Attorney having access to the Watson Tapes, but refusing to provide this discovery to the defense. The District Attorney’s initial reason for not disclosing the tapes was that ongoing investigations would be jeopardized by the disclosure of the tapes. The superior court conducting Ms. Van

1 Houten's 2017 Franklin hearing did not believe that any investigations could still 2 be "ongoing" for a crime committed in 1969 and after the responsible parties had 3 been tried and convicted. The court demanded that the prosecutor provide it with 4 the transcripts of the tapes, which it reviewed in camera.

5 Prior to providing the court with the tapes, the prosecutor admitted that 6 there were no ongoing investigations after 48 years and that there were four 7 references to Ms. Van Houten in the tapes. The court ordered the prosecutor to flag 8 the four references to Ms. Van Houten prior to providing the court with the tapes.
9 The prosecutor then admitted there might be more than four references to Ms. Van 10 Houten. To this day, neither Ms. Van Houten nor her counsel have been given 11 access to the Watson Tapes notwithstanding the admitted references to Ms. Van 12 Houten. The Watson Tapes are necessary to prove the truth of Ms. Van Houten's 13 statement regarding Manson's conduct as the leader of his cult, and the violent 14 control he exerted on his cult members, including Ms. Van Houten.

15 Penal Code section 1054.1 states in pertinent part,

16
17 The prosecution "shall disclose to the defendant or his or her attorney 18 all of the following materials and information, if it is in the possession 19 of the prosecuting attorney or if the prosecution attorney knows it to be 20 in the possession of the investigating agencies: . . . (b) Statements of all 21 defendants . . . (c) All relevant real evidence seized or obtained as a 22 part of the investigation of the offenses charged." 23
24
25
26
27

1 Charles "Tex" Watson was a co-defendant, but he and Ms. Van Houten were 2 tried separately. Therefore, Ms. Van Houten had the statutory right to disclosure 3 of the tapes under section 1054.1.

4 Further, Ms. Van Houten has the right to disclosure of the tapes as part of 5 her Franklin evidence. A hearing under Franklin allows the defendant access to 6 any evidence pursuant to the procedures set forth in section 1204 and rule 4.437 of 7 the California Rules of Court limited only by the evidence code. The subject of the 8 Franklin hearing is allowed to "place on the record any documents, evaluations, or 9 testimony (subject to cross-examination) that may be relevant at his eventual youth 10 offender parole hearing, and the prosecution likewise may put on the record any 11 evidence that demonstrates the juvenile offender's culpability or cognitive maturity, 12 or otherwise bears on the influence of youth-related factors." (People v. Franklin, 13 supra, 63 Cal.4th at p. 284.) Therefore, any admissible, relevant evidence, 14 including but not limited to evidence subject to disclosure under Brady v. Maryland 15 (1963) 373 U.S. 83 material, should be given to the defendant for purposes of 16 establishing the youthful offender evidence for use in obtaining parole. Ms. Van 17 Houten has repeatedly been denied this opportunity. This is a direct violation of 18 right under state statutory law, and Constitutional rights of confrontation under 19 the Sixth Amendment.

20 21 B. The Constitutional Right to Discovery Under Brady v. Maryland.

22
23 There are three components of Brady: the evidence at issue must be favorable 24 to the accused; that evidence must have been suppressed by the State, either 25 willfully or inadvertently; and prejudice must have resulted. (Strickler v. Greene 26
27

1 (1999) 527 U.S. 263, 281-282 (Strickler); Edwards v. Ayers (9th Cir. 2008) 542 F.3d 2 759, 768.) The terms “suppression,” “withholding,” and “failure to disclose” have 3 the same meaning for Brady purposes. (See Benn v. Lambert, 283 F.3d 1040, 1053 4 (9th Cir.2002).) It does not matter that Brady material involves “the good faith or 5 bad faith of the prosecution.” (Brady v. Maryland (1963) 373 U.S. at p. 87.) Brady 6 does not distinguish between pre and post conviction evidence held by the 7 government. (Ibid.) Ms. Van Houten renews her request that the Court apply 8 Brady in this case.

9 It cannot be disputed that the first component of Brady requiring that the 10 evidence is favorable to the defendant exists in this case. The Court conducting the 11 Franklin hearing found that Ms. Van Houten was mentioned eight times on the 12 Watson Tapes, and that Watson repeatedly talked about Manson’s control over the 13 Manson cult members. (Exh. 12, at p. 3.) In Supreme Court case number S230851, 14 the Attorney General conceded Manson’s control over his cult members who acted 15 on his behalf, as stated by Watson in the tapes. Therefore, the tapes 16 unquestionably contain exculpatory evidence involving Ms. Van Houten. They also 17 directly dispute the Governor’s finding that Ms. Van Houten is attempting to shift 18 blame to Manson.

19 The second element of Brady requires the evidence to be in the possession of 20 the government who refuses to share it with the defense. (Strickler v. Greene, 21 supra, 527 U.S. at pp. 281-282.) Again, there is no dispute about the government’s 22 possession of the Watson Tapes, and that it is withholding this evidence from Ms.
23 Van Houten.

24 The final element of Brady is prejudice. Because the tapes contain evidence 25 that Manson controlled his followers, Ms. Van Houten’s participation in the 26
27

1 LaBianca murders is mitigated by that control. The Governor's 2020 reversal 2 dismissed Manson's control as a factor diminishing Ms. Van Houten's culpability.
3 Evidence of this control in the words of Manson's "first lieutenant" directly 4 contradicts the Governor's contrary findings.

5 "The Brady rule . . . is over 50 years old. It is alive, well, and, as we explain, 6 it is self executing. There need be no motion, request, or objection to trigger 7 disclosure. The prosecution has a sua sponte duty to provide Brady information." 8 (People v. Harrison (2017) 16 Cal.App.5th 704, 706.) Ms. Van Houten has a right to 9 the disclosure of the Watson Tapes. Alternatively, should the Court persist in 10 refusing to order the disclosure of this evidence, the District Attorney and Governor 11 should be precluded from arguing against Manson's violent control of Ms. Van 12 Houten as a factor favoring parole.

13 Ms. Van Houten concedes that no case has held that Brady applies to a parole 14 hearing. However, there is no authority whatsoever that states it does not apply to 15 a parole hearing. Because Ms. Van Houten remains incarcerated, and the Brady 16 material in this case could promote her release, fundamental fairness and due 17 process require the tapes be released.

1                   ALLOWING THE GOVERNOR, AS AN ELECTED OFFICIAL, TO 2                   MAKE THE FINAL PAROLE DECISION IN MURDER CASES
3                   VIOLATES EQUAL PROTECTION BY CREATING A
4                   DIFFERENT STANDARD FOR PERSONS, LIKE MS. VAN
5                   HOUTEN, WHO HAVE BEEN CONVICTED OF CELEBRATED 6                   OR NOTORIOUS CRIMES.

7 8                   A. Summary of the Argument.

9 10                   Under the California Constitution, the Governor is given the authority to 11                   reverse grants of parole in murders cases. (Cal. Const., art. V, subd.(b), § 8.). The 12                   Governor, as an elected official, has an inherent conflict against approving parole 13                   for high profile defendants, such as Ms. Van Houten, whose grant of parole may be 14                   unpopular with the voting public. This results in an equal protection violation by 15                   creating a different parole standard for inmates whose murder convictions arise 16                   from celebrated or notorious crimes.

17                   Governor Newsom’s two parole reversals prove he did not act as an impartial 18                   factfinder who applied the same legal standard in Ms. Van Houten’s case. In 2019, 19                   the Governor stated in his written parole reversal, 20

21                   Ms. Van Houten and the Manson Family committed some 22                   of the most notorious and brutal killings in California's 23                   history. The gruesome crimes perpetrated by Ms. Van 24                   Houten and other Manson Family members in an attempt 25

1 to incite social chaos continue to inspire fear to this day. As 2 acknowledged by the Board in Ms. Van Houten's parole 3 hearing, the crimes were "heinous, cruel, and inexplicably 4 disturbing and dispassionate. Almost 50 years later, the 5 magnitude of these crimes and their impact on society 6 endure.

7
8 (Exh. 9; at p. 3.)

9 In his 2020 reversal Governor Newsom similarly states,

10 I remain concerned by Ms. Van Houten's characterization of 11 her participation in this gruesome double murder, part of a 12 series of crimes that rank among the most infamous and 13 fear-inducing in California history.
14

16 (Exh. 2, at p. 3.) The Governor goes on to state,

17 Given the extreme nature of the crime in which she was 18 involved, I do not believe she has sufficiently demonstrated
19 that she has come to terms with the totality of the factors
20 that led her to participate in the vicious Manson Family
21 killings. Before she can be safely released, Ms. Van Houten
22 must do more to develop her understanding of the factors
23 that caused her to seek acceptance from such a negative,
24 violent influence, and perpetrate extreme acts of wanton
25 violence.
26

1 (Exh. 2, at p. 4.)

2 The Governor's characterization of the LaBianca murders as "the most 3 infamous and fear-inducing in California history," coupled with his finding that 4 "Before she can be safely released, Ms. Van Houten must do more to develop her 5 understanding of the factors that caused her to seek acceptance from such a 6 negative, violent influence, and perpetrate extreme acts of wanton violence" without 7 citing what more she must do before the Governor will find her suitable for parole 8 shows there is nothing Ms. Van Houten can do to obtain parole from this Governor.
9 Accordingly, Ms. Van Houten and similarly situated inmates are evaluated by a 10 different parole legal standard than other inmates convicted of murder.

11 12 B. The Governor Violated Equal Protection by Evaluating Ms. Van 13 Houten Under a Different, Harsher, Standard for Granting Parole.

14
15 Article V, section 8, subdivision (b) of the California Constitution states,

16
17 No decision of the parole authority of this State with 18 respect to the granting, denial, revocation, or suspension of 19 parole of a person sentenced to an indeterminate term upon 20 conviction of murder shall become effective for a period of 21 30 days, during which the Governor may review the 22 decision subject to procedures provided by statute. The 23 Governor may only affirm, modify, or reverse the decision of 24 the parole authority on the basis of the same factors which 25 the parole authority is required to consider. The Governor 26
27

1 shall report to the Legislature each parole decision 2 affirmed, modified, or reversed, stating the pertinent facts 3 and reasons for the action.

4 5 The statutory procedures for the Governor's review of a parole decision are 6 set forth in section 3041.2, which states:

7
8 (a) During the 30 days following the granting, denial, 9 revocation, or suspension by a parole authority of the parole 10 of a person sentenced to an indeterminate prison term 11 based upon a conviction of murder, the Governor, when 12 reviewing the authority's decision pursuant to subdivision 13 (b) of Section 8 of Article V of the Constitution, shall review 14 materials provided by the parole authority.

15
16 (b) If the Governor decides to reverse or modify a parole 17 decision of a parole authority pursuant to subdivision (b) of 18 Section 8 of Article V of the Constitution, he or she shall 19 send a written statement to the inmate specifying the 20 reasons for his or her decision.”

22 Prior to the addition of subdivision (b) to section 8 of article V, the power to 23 grant or deny parole was statutory and committed exclusively to the judgment and 24 discretion of the Board. (In re Rosenkrantz, supra, 29 Cal.4th at pp. 658–659; In re 25 Fain (1983) 145 Cal.App.3d 540, 548–550.) The Governor had no direct role in 26

1 decisions whether to grant or deny parole to an incarcerated individual, other than 2 to request that the full Board sitting in bank review a parole decision (§ 3041.1) or 3 revoke parole (§ 3062). The constitutional authority of the Governor to reverse a 4 grant of parole by the Board was limited to the fundamentally distinct power to 5 grant a reprieve, pardon, or commutation. (In re Fain, supra, 145 Cal.App.3d at p.
6 548; see Cal. Const., art. V., § 8, subd. (a).) By adding subdivision (b) to section 8 of 7 article V, the California voters conferred upon the Governor constitutional 8 authority to review the Board's decisions concerning the parole of individuals who 9 have been convicted of murder and serving indeterminate sentences for that 10 offense.

11 Prior to the addition of subdivision (b), the American Civil Liberties Union 12 (“ACLU”) opposed this expansion of the Governor’s role in parole decisions because 13 it raised “serious questions of due process and equal protection by attempting to 14 create a different standard for persons convicted of celebrated or notorious crimes.”
15 (Exh. 13, [arguments in opposition to SCA 9].)

16 The ACLU further opposed the proposal as adding a supplemental level of 17 executive authority not in existence at the time the individual committed and 18 subsequently convicted of a criminal offense and argued against expanding the 19 Governor’s role in this way because it “improperly attempts to override the 20 neutrality and expertise of the parole authority.” As relevant here, the ACLU 21 further argued,

22
23 Decisions made by the granting authority would be provisional for the 24 30-day term during which the state executive may find it expedient to 25 unilaterally disregard or disaffirm the initial decision. Such revisions 26
27

1 by a Governor could easily result from political or popular influences 2 that, properly, are not considered by the parole authority. This factor 3 alone would allow subjective and often irrelevant or irrational concerns 4 to override carefully considered factual judgments.

5
6 (Exh. 13, [arguments in opposition to SCA].)

7 This prescient concern has materialized in Ms. Van Houten's case. The 8 Governor's four parole reversals in Ms. Van Houten's case that were based on a lack 9 of evidence and improper application of the relevant law, violated equal protection 10 by creating a class of inmates convicted of infamous murders who are judged more 11 harshly by the Governor.

12 The Fourteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution and article I, 13 section 7 of the California Constitution guarantee all persons the equal protection 14 of the laws. (In re Williams (2020) 57 Cal.App.5th 427, 433.) Persons who are 15 similarly situated with respect to a law's legitimate purposes must be treated 16 equally. (People v. Brown (2012) 54 Cal.4th 314, 328.) Equal protection of the law 17 is denied only where no rational relationship exists between the disparity of 18 treatment and a legitimate governmental purpose. (People v. Turnage (2012) 55 19 Cal.4th 62, 74.)

20 In evaluating a claimed equal protection violation, courts undertake de novo 21 review in answering two questions to decide whether a statutory distinction is so 22 devoid of even minimal rationality that it violates equal protection. (See People v.
23 Laird (2018) 27 Cal.App.5th 458, 469.) First, it must be determined if the state has 24 adopted a classification affecting two or more groups that are similarly situated in 25 an unequal manner. (People v. Chatman (2018) 4 Cal.5th 277, 289.) Here, article 26
27

1 V, section 8, subdivision (b) of the California Constitution has resulted in the 2 creation of a class of inmates convicted of high profile, notorious murders whose 3 grants of parole by the Board are reversed by the Governor as a result of political or 4 popular influences that, properly, are not considered by the parole authority. This 5 allows subjective and often irrelevant or irrational concerns to override carefully 6 considered factual judgments by the Board. The first step of an equal protection 7 argument is satisfied in this case.

8 Second, an equal protection claim is successfully stated if the challenged 9 classification of a similarly situated group bears no relationship to a legitimate 10 state purpose under “rational basis” scrutiny. (People v. Love (2020) 55 Cal.App.5th 11 273, 287–288.) This second element is met because there can be no legitimate 12 purpose to disregard the applicable standard for assessing parole suitability based 13 on the subjective and irrelevant concern over currying public favor by an elected 14 official. Although “rational basis scrutiny” is exceedingly deferential, it is met in 15 this case because it is not possible to conceive of a rational reason for the resulting 16 differential treatment between rehabilitated inmates who qualify for release to 17 parole under the governing legal standard, but who are denied parole because a 18 contrary finding would be unpopular with the voting citizenry.

19 At the parole suitability hearing, Debra Tate described the petition she 20 initiated to “to keep Ms. Van Houten in prison until she dies.” She claimed the 21 petition garnered 170,000 signatures with 28,000 adding written comments. (Exh.
22 3, at p. 102.)<sup>7</sup> It is reasonable to infer that this great number of voters opposing 23

24 <sup>7</sup> The record contains a transcription error stating the petition has “170” 25 signatures.
26
27

1 parole influenced Governor Newsom's decision to reverse Ms. Van Houten's parole 2 despite no evidence of a current risk to public safety.

3 Governor Newsom's reversal of parole in this case must be reversed for the 4 additional reason that it violated Ms. Van Houten's rights of equal protection under 5 the law.

6

8 THE GOVERNOR'S REVERSAL IS INVALID BECAUSE HE 9 EXCEEDED HIS 30-DAY PERIOD OF JURISDICTION TO ISSUE
10 THE DECISION.

11
12 As stated above, Article V, section 8, subdivision (b) of the California 13 Constitution, and section 3041.2, give the Governor only a 30-day window of 14 jurisdiction in which to affirm, modify, or reverse the decision of the parole 15 authority on the basis of the same factors which the parole authority is required to 16 consider. The 30 day period commences on the effective date of the Board's 17 decision. The Board's decision become effective on the date it refers the decision to 18 the governor. (In re Arafiles (1992) 6 Cal.App.4th 1467, 1474.) Since around March 19 2020, concerns over COVID have caused the Board to prioritize its review of 20 hearings where an inmate is found suitable for parole.

21 Ms. Van Houten was found suitable for parole on July 23, 2020. The 22 Governor reversed the grant of parole 127 days later on November 27, 2020, a 23 Friday after the Thanksgiving holiday. This unusually lengthy time between the 24 suitability finding and the Governor's reversal strongly suggests the Governor 25 exceeded his 30-day window of authority to reverse Ms. Van Houten's parole 26
27

1 suitability finding.

2 On November 16, 2020, prior to the Governor's November 27 reversal, 3 petitioner's counsel attempted to ascertain the date of the Board's referral to the 4 Governor because of the unusually long period of time that had passed since the 5 Board's decision. On November 19, 2020, a representative of the Board advised 6 counsel it did not disclose when a case goes to the Governor's officer for review.
7 (Exh. 8, p. 2.) The fact the Board would not disclose the referral date reinforces a 8 conclusion that the Governor missed his statutorily mandated deadline for issuing 9 the denial, as there is no legitimate reason to keep secret when the Governor's 10 review period begins.

11 Petitioner recognizes that in In re Johnson (1992) 8 Cal.App.4th 618, the 12 Governor made an untimely request to have the Board reconsider a grant of parole.
13 Although the Governor's referral was untimely, the Board had jurisdiction to review 14 the matter because the inmate had not yet served his minimum sentence. Because 15 of this, the Board had jurisdiction to reverse the grant of parole. (Id. at p. 624.)
16 Johnson does not apply to the present case. Ms. Van Houten has served 51 years 17 on an indeterminate life sentence with a minimum service term of seven years. She 18 completed her minimum sentence 44 years ago.

19 If respondent is able to provide evidence that the Board referred its decision 20 to the Governor on or after October 29, 2020 on a parole decision dated July 23, 21 2020, then petitioner concedes the Governor acted within the 30-day period of his 22 jurisdiction. If, however, the Board sent the governor its decision prior to October 23 29, 2020, Governor acted beyond his 30-day window of jurisdiction, his reversal was 24 a nullity.

CONCLUSION

3 The real reason for the Governor's reversal is the name Manson. Although 4 Manson has since passed away, Ms. Van Houten continues to carry the brand of a 5 despicable criminal who deceived her and so many others.

6 Because all of the evidence indicates Ms. Van Houten is not currently an 7 unreasonable risk to public safety if placed on supervised parole, no matter what 8 standard is applied, it is respectfully requested this Honorable Court grant the 9 requested relief.
